Almost always Mrs. Bowen plans some kind of entertainment for after dinner. It might be a troupe of Chinese musicians or jugglers, or of traditional Hawaiian dancers. Once, for a performance of Kabuki, low screens were set up on the terrace to make a stage, and the lighting was supplied by the guests, each carrying a candle or lantern. Even for small parties she likes to have a harpist playing in the garden during cocktails and dinner. "It is pleasant and relaxing," she says, "and the music doesn't intrude."

For each group of four guests a cocktail tray is set up with hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, two containers of martinis-for-two.

The harpist plays all evening on the terrace.

HOUSE & GARDEN'S

Liqueur Cook Book

hose exotic elixirs known as liqueurs are among the most potent all cooking liquids. Defined as spirits that have been sweetened, avored, and occasionally colored, liqueurs owe their distinctive ste to subtle extracts of ingredients (caraway and aniseed, orange d mint, coffee and cocoa are only a few). Although the formulas e as jealously guarded as the crown jewels, the liqueurs most com- only used for cooking can be roughly broken down into three main tegories: those with a fruit base (Grand Marnier, Apry, Cherry eering, crème de cassis, and others); those that take their tang om aromatic herbs and spices (such as Strega, Chartreuse, küm- el, crème de menthe); and the coffee and chocolate liqueurs Kahlua, Tia Maria, crème de cacao). Just a small amount is suffi- ient to spread the ineffable essence of the liquid throughout a dish. tablespoon can flambé an omelette or bring out the freshness of uit, a half or third cup will dominate a dessert soufflé or put a de- lectable glaze on duck. There are two things to remember about liqueurs. First, that they are sweet and should therefore not be used indiscriminately, but confined to dishes that are enhanced or complemented by their honeyed qualities—ham and pork, poultry, desserts, and fruit. Second, liqueurs should never be added with a heavy hand—merely in sufficient quantity to point up, not overpower, the food. Certain liqueurs are natural partners for certain foods. The freshness of crème de menthe is a superb counterpoint to a chocolate roll or soufflé, the anise flavor of Pernod does wonderful things to seafood, and the rich, orange-flavored liqueurs taste as good in the sauce for a duck or the glaze for a ham as they do in that all-time dessert delight, crêpes Suzette. To cook with liqueurs is not expensive. Any good cook can afford to have on hand a soupçon set of six or a dozen liqueurs in miniature bottles, all neatly housed in a portable pack like the one designed by H&G, on pages 298 and 299.

FRUIT FLAVOR

Marron Pudding

pounds fresh chestnuts in shell, or 1 pound dried chestnuts, or 1 large can whole chestnuts in brine ½ tablespoons cocoa
½ cups confectioners' sugar
tablespoons butter
½ cup blanched almonds, coarsely chopped
¼ cup Grand Marnier, Cointreau, or other orange-flavored liqueur cups milk
cup sugar teaspoon vanilla tablespoons flour
egg yolks
¼ cup Marsala wine
Candied fruits

To prepare fresh chestnuts in the shell, cut a cross with a sharp knife on the flat side of each chestnut. Place in a saucepan and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil and remove from heat. Take out only a few chestnuts at a time and peel off outer and inner skins while still hot. Cover the shelled chestnuts with water and simmer until tender. Drain. To prepare dried chestnuts, cover with boiling water to which ¼ teaspoon baking soda has been added and soak overnight. Boil the chestnuts in the soaking liquid until tender. If canned chestnuts are used, heat them to the boiling point.

Force the chestnuts through a sieve or food mill while they are still hot and blend thoroughly with the cocoa and confectioners' sugar. Cream the butter well. Beat into the chestnut mixture with the almonds. Beat well, then add the Grand Marnier, Cointreau, or other orange-flavored liqueur. Pour into a buttered charlotte mold or small soufflé dish. Cover with foil and chill in the refrigerator for several hours.

Meanwhile prepare a pastry cream: combine the milk, sugar, and vanilla, and heat to the boiling point. Blend with the flour and egg yolks and cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens and just begins to boil. Add the Marsala wine and simmer, stirring, for a few moments. Cool.

To serve, unmold the chestnut pudding on a serving dish. Decorate with candied fruits and serve with the cooled pastry cream. Serves 8–10.

Glazed Spareribs

5 pounds spareribs
4 cloves garlic, halved
Salt, pepper to taste
1 cup Japanese soy sauce
1 cup tomato catsup
½ cup cherry liqueur
½ cup honey
1 teaspoon Tabasco

Roast the spareribs in a 350° oven for 1 hour. In the meantime, sprinkle the halved garlic cloves with salt and press them with the flat side of a knife until they become mashed. Combine with the soy sauce, tomato catsup, cherry liqueur, honey, and Tabasco in a saucepan. Heat gently.

When the spareribs have cooked for 45 minutes, brush them with the sauce and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Continue baking and brushing with the sauce until well coated and crisp. Cut the spareribs into serving pieces and serve with the remaining glaze as a sauce. Serves 6.

Variation: Roast spareribs as above. Heat 1 cup orange marmalade and add 3–4 tablespoons of Curaçao to make it of spreading consistency. If mixture becomes too thick, add more Curaçao. Brush on spareribs while they are cooking.

Newest idea on the party circuit is Fondue Chocolat, a sweet addition to the roster of Swiss fondues. The technique is the same—speared foods such as cake or fruit slices, bread cubes are dunked into fondue mixture kept hot over an alcohol burner —but the flavor is decidedly different, and delicious.

Fondue Chocolat

3-ounce bars Toblerone chocolate, broken in triangular pieces
½ cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons Cointreau or Grand Marnier
Long pieces of sponge or angel food cake; lady fingers; apple slices; fresh orange slices; pineapple chunks, well drained; tiny profiteroles; or cubes of French bread for dunking

Combine the chocolate, cream, and Cointreau or Grand Marnier in a 1-quart saucepan. Stir over very low heat until the chocolate is melted and the mixture is smooth. Keep warm over a candle warmer or a small flame. Serve as fondue with any of the foods mentioned above for dunking.

Deep Dish Peach Pie

10–12 fresh peaches, peeled and quartered
⅔ cup sugar
Dash salt
3 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup ground almonds
1–2 tablespoons flour
1 recipe rich pie dough
½ cup Southern Comfort
Heavy cream or sour cream

Fill a deep pie dish with the fresh peaches. Add the sugar, salt, butter, and ground almonds and sprinkle lightly with flour. Cover with the rich pie dough and make an indentation in the center. Pour in the Southern Comfort. Bake in a 450° oven for 10 minutes, reduce the heat to 350° and cook until the peaches are tender and the crust nicely browned. Serve warm with cream.

Duck with Apricot Glaze

1 pound dried apricots
1½ cups dry sherry
Rind of 2 lemons, thinly sliced
Juice of 2 lemons
⅓ cup apricot liqueur
⅓ cup Curaçao
1 cup honey
2 5-pound ducks with giblets
Salt to taste
2 tablespoons flour

Cook the apricots according to the directions on the package, substituting 1 cup sherry for the water. Place the lemon rind in a saucepan and cover with boiling water. Simmer 5 minutes. Drain well. Place 1 cup of the stewed apricots and lemon juice in a blender with the apricot liqueur, Curacao, and honey. Blend well. Pour into a saucepan and use as a glaze for basting the ducks.

Place the remaining stewed apricots and the lemon rind in the cavities of the ducks. (Reserve the giblets.) Truss the ducks and place on a rack in a baking pan. Sprinkle with salt and brush with the apricot glaze. Bake in a 350° oven for about 2 hours. Baste the ducks every 15 minutes with the glaze. Prick the birds with a fork several times during baking to allow fat to drain off.

Meanwhile cover the reserved giblets with cold water and simmer for 1 hour. When the ducks are nicely browned and tender (the legs should be easy to move), remove to a warm serving platter. Skim off the fat from the roasting pan. Place over medium heat and sprinkle in the flour. Add the remaining ½ cup sherry and scrape up all bits of brown from pan. Add the remaining apricot glaze and enough cooking liquid from the giblets to make a gravy. Strain the gravy into a sauce dish and serve with the ducks. Serves 6.

Broiled Peach Dessert

8 peach halves
4 tablespoons peach liqueur or crème de noyaux
1 macaroons, crumbled
1 cup heavy cream

Place the peaches, cavity side up, in a shallow baking dish. Pour ½ tablespoon of peach liqueur or crème de noyaux into each cavity. Sprinkle each with the macaroon crumbs. Broil until the crumbs are brown and the fruit is hot through. Serve with unwhipped heavy cream.

Chilled Pumpkin Soup au Grand Marnier

1 pound soup meat and bones
1½ pounds peeled yellow pumpkin, chopped, or 2 cups canned mashed pumpkin
2 small raw carrots, grated
2 medium white turnips, grated
2 raw potatoes, chopped fine
2 stalks celery, grated
2 leeks, chopped fine
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground thyme
¼ teaspoon allspice
2 cups light cream
2 1-pound cans corn niblets, well drained
½ cup Grand Marnier
Finely chopped candied ginger

Combine the soup meat and bones, pumpkin, the vegetables (except corn), and seasonings in 2½ quarts of water in a large pot. Cook slowly, well covered, skimming soup when necessary. After 2 hours, remove bones and pieces of meat and strain remaining mixture through a medium strainer. Allow to cool. Chill thoroughly. When ready to serve, add the light cream, corn, and Grand Marnier. Serve soup sprinkled with finely chopped candied ginger. Serves 8–10.

Omelette George Sand

¼ cup mixed crystallized fruits
¼ cup chopped marrons in syrup
⅓ cup peach liqueur or apricot liqueur
½ cup apricot jam
6 eggs, separated
5 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons butter
¼ cup finely ground macaroon crumbs

Soak the fruits and marrons in the peach or apricot liqueur for 1 hour or longer. Add the apricot jam and heat gently. Set aside.

Beat the egg yolks in an electric mixer until light and gradually add 4 tablespoons sugar. Continue beating until very light and pale. Beat the egg whites with the salt until stiff but not dry. Fold the egg whites into the yolk mixture.

Heat 1 tablespoon butter in a large skillet. Pour in the egg mixture and cook over medium heat until puffed and almost firm. Heat the broiler until very hot. Melt the remaining 2 tablespoons butter and pour over the top of the omelette. Sprinkle top with the macaroon crumbs and remaining tablespoon sugar. Brown rapidly under the broiler, watching carefully to prevent burning. Place on a warm platter and garnish with the warm fruit mixture. Serve at once. Serves 6.

HERB AND SPICE FLAVOR

Chocolate Roll

4 large or 5 small eggs
¾ cup sugar
½ cup potato starch
Dash salt
4 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
4 tablespoons crème de menthe
2 cups heavy cream
½ cup confectioners' sugar
Shaved chocolate

Beat the eggs in an electric mixer until frothy. Add the sugar gradually while beating constantly until the mixture is the consistency of whipped cream. Sift the potato starch, salt, and cocoa together, and sift ⅓ at a time into the egg mixture, folding gently after each addition. Add 2 tablespoons of the crème de menthe.

Butter a jelly roll pan, 11" by 18", and line it with wax paper so that the paper extends at least 2" over each end. Butter the paper well and spread the batter evenly on it. Bake in a 425° oven for 7–8 minutes. Loosen cake from sides of the pan with a spatula and invert onto a clean towel. Remove wax paper and immediately roll cake up, lifting edge of towel to start cake rolling. Allow cake to remain rolled 5 minutes. Unroll and cover with a slightly damp towel until cool.

Whip the cream until stiff. Add remaining 2 tablespoons crème de menthe and the confectioners' sugar. Spread about half the cream on the cake and, using the towel to start the cake rolling, roll up the cake. Place on a serving dish and cover top and sides with the remaining cream. Sprinkle the top with shaved chocolate. Serves 8.

Variations: 1. Use cake recipe to make individual soufflés: pour the batter into small, well-buttered ramekins. Bake in a 425° oven for 5 minutes, then remove immediately from ramekins. Turn out and fill center with mint, vanilla, or chocolate ice cream. Pour ⅓ cup crème de menthe over ice cream.

⅓ cup butter, melted
Salt to taste
½ teaspoon paprika
½ cup green Chartreuse, slightly heated

Brush the split chickens generously with the butter on both sides. Place them on a broiler pan, skin side up, and broil until the skin is blistered and turning brown. Sprinkle with salt and paprika, turn the chickens over and broil 10 minutes longer. Total cooking time should be about 25 minutes, but it may vary depending on the distance the chickens are from the flame and how intense the heat is. To test for doneness, pierce the chickens between the leg and breast with a sharp knife. The flesh should be white and firm, with no trace of pink.

When the chickens are almost done, remove from the broiler and pour the Chartreuse over them. Set flame at center and spoon over the chickens until the flame is out. Return to broiler for a few minutes to glaze the top. Serve with pan juices poured over the top. Serves 4.

Mix the cornstarch with enough water to moisten it. Add to the pan juices and simmer, stirring constantly, until the sauce is thickened. Serve with the tenderloin. Serves 4.

Add the milk, return to heat and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce is very thick and smooth. Add the sugar and stir well. Cool slightly. Add the egg yolks and beat well. Add the crème de menthe and cognac. If mixture becomes thin, return to heat and cook gently, stirring constantly, until it is like thick custard. Cool.

Butter a 1½-quart soufflé dish and dust with sugar. Beat the egg whites with the salt until they form stiff peaks. Mix ⅓ of the egg whites with the custard until light and well blended. Fold in the remaining egg whites very lightly. Pile the soufflé mixture lightly into the dish and bake in a preheated 375° oven for 25–30 minutes, until well puffed and delicately brown. Baking for 2½–3 hours will produce meat slightly pink in the center. For lamb that is more well done, cook an additional 30–45 minutes. Before serving, remove the garlic pieces and skim off fat from the pan juices. Pour the anisette over the lamb and set aflame, basting with the flaming juices. Serve at once. Serves 6–8.

COFFEE FLAVOR

Jamaica Trifle

4 egg yolks
¼ cup sugar
Dash salt
1 tablespoon flour
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Butter
1 sponge cake or 2 sponge layers
½ cup Tia Maria
½ cup currant jelly
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Powdered coffee

Place the egg yolks in a heavy saucepan. Combine the sugar, salt, and flour and stir them into the egg yolks. Add the milk slowly, stirring to avoid lumps. Cook over medium heat and stir until the custard begins to thicken. Reduce the heat and cook until the custard is thick and creamy. Be careful not to cook too long or the custard will curdle. (To lessen chance of curdling, cook custard over hot water. This method will take longer.) Cool. Add the vanilla.

Butter a 1½-quart charlotte mold or straight-sided casserole. Cut part of the sponge cake into strips ½" thick and the length of the sides of the mold and cut a circle to fit the bottom of the mold. Line the bottom of the mold with the cake, then the sides, using additional butter if needed to make the cake adhere to the sides. Dribble the Tia Maria evenly over the cake. Melt the currant jelly and brush half over the surface of the cake. Pour half of the custard into the mold. Add a layer of cake cut to fit center of mold and coat with the remaining melted currant jelly. Add remaining custard and top with more cake. Allow to chill for 12 hours.

Unmold by running a spatula around the edges of the mold. Place a serving platter over the mold, then invert. Decorate the trifle with whipped cream piped through a pastry tube. Dust the top lightly with powdered coffee. Serves 8.

Kahlua Mousse

1 cup sugar
12 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, grated
4 eggs
Dash salt
⅓ cup Kahlua
¼ cup cognac
3 cups heavy cream, whipped
Whipped cream
Shaved chocolate

Combine the sugar and 1 cup water in a saucepan and heat slowly until the sugar is completely melted, about 5–6 minutes. Place the grated chocolate in a blender with the eggs and salt. Turn the blender on to the lowest speed and add the syrup in a steady stream. Blend until the chocolate is melted and the mixture is smooth. Cool.

Add the Kahlua and cognac and beat well. Fold the mixture into the whipped cream. Place in a 2-quart melon mold or any decorative mold and chill several hours. To unmold, dip the mold into hot water for a moment, then invert onto a chilled serving platter. Pipe whipped cream around the base of the mousse with a fluted pastry tube and sprinkle mousse with shaved chocolate.

LIQUEUR VARIATIONS FOR FAVORITE RECIPES

Liqueur Soufflé

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
5 egg yolks
⅓ cup liqueur flavoring
Butter
6 egg whites

Heat the butter in a saucepan and add the flour. Cook until golden and bubbling. Remove from the heat and add the milk. Return to the heat and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Add the sugar and salt. Cool slightly, then add the egg yolks, beating well. When the mixture is cool, add the liqueur. The sauce should have the consistency of a thick cream sauce. If the sauce is too thin, place over low heat and thicken slightly, stirring constantly.

Butter a 1½-quart soufflé dish or charlotte mold. Sprinkle with sugar and discard excess. Beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold carefully and quickly into the sauce. Pile lightly into soufflé dish and bake in a preheated 375° oven for 30 minutes, until soufflé has risen well and is delicately browned on top. Serve at once with Custard Sauce or Flavored Whipped Cream. Serves 4–5.

Flavor variations:

1. Add ⅓ cup Kahlua or Chartreuse to basic recipe. Soak 6 almond macaroons in an additional ⅓ cup Kahlua or Chartreuse for 15 minutes. Place them around the sides of prepared soufflé dish. Serve soufflé with almond-flavored whipped cream.
2. Add ⅓ cup ripe banana mashed with a fork and flavored with ¼ cup banana liqueur to basic recipe. Cover bottom of soufflé dish with 2 sliced bananas before adding soufflé mixture.
3. Add ⅓ cup thick strawberry purée flavored with ⅓ cup Framberry.

Liqueur Zabaglione

8 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
½ eggshell of liqueur flavoring

Beat the egg yolks well and add the sugar gradually. When the mixture is very light and frothy, add the liqueur instead of the usual Marsala wine. Place in the top of a large double boiler over simmering water. Beat constantly until mixture is almost double in bulk and is beginning to thicken. Do not overcook or mixture will curdle. Pour at once into parfait glasses. Serve warm or cold.

Note: Zabaglione may be served frozen. Add 1 pint of heavy cream, whipped, to the mixture and pour immediately into a mold. Place in the freezing compartment for several hours.

Suggested liqueur flavorings:

1. 3 tablespoons apricot liqueur and 2 tablespoons cognac
2. 4–5 tablespoons Tia Maria. Sprinkle top with powdered coffee
3. 4 tablespoons green Chartreuse

Fruit Glazes

These fruit glazes are based on ½ cup fruit jam and 2 tablespoons of similar fruit-flavored liqueur. They may be used to coat cooled pastries before filling, to brush the surface of layer cakes before icing, or to brush over filled fruit tartlets.

Apricot: Heat ½ cup apricot jam over medium heat. Add 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 tablespoon lemon juice and cook until sugar is dissolved. Strain the mixture and cool. Add 2 tablespoons apricot liqueur.

Currant: Heat ½ cup currant jelly with 2 tablespoons Framberry. Stir until jelly is melted. This is particularly good with strawberry or raspberry desserts.

Orange: Melt ½ cup orange marmalade over medium heat. Strain the marmalade and add 2–3 tablespoons Curaçao or Cointreau.

For a colorful holiday buffet dessert, arrange cut-up fruits in pineapple, melon, and orange shells on a platter of cracked ice, to be flavored with choice of liqueurs decanted into cruets.

Flavored Whipped Cream

Whip 1 cup heavy cream until frothy. Gradually add ⅓ cup confectioners' sugar and desired flavoring and continue to beat until cream is of desired consistency. Use as a contrasting flavor for desserts.

Suggested liqueur flavorings:

1. 1 tablespoon crème de noyaux
2. 2 tablespoons crème de menthe
3. 1 tablespoon Curaçao and 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
4. 2 tablespoons crème de cacao, 2 teaspoons unsweetened cocoa
5. 2 tablespoons Framberry and ¼ cup mashed, strained raspberries
6. 2 tablespoons Tia Maria
7. 2 tablespoons peach liqueur and ¼ teaspoon almond extract

Bavarian Cream

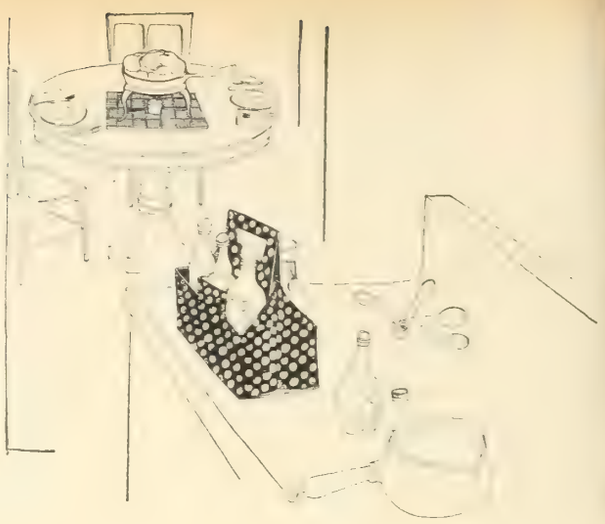
1½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
6 egg yolks
⅔ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk, scalded
Liqueur flavoring
1½ cups heavy cream
Crushed strawberries or any desired fruit

Soak the gelatin in ¾ cup cold water. Place the egg yolks in a large saucepan and beat until light and pale. Add the sugar and salt, beating constantly. Stir the scalded milk into the eggs. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture coats a spoon and begins to thicken. Add the soaked gelatin and stir until melted. Set the custard over cold water and cool, stirring often, until it has the consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Add desired liqueur flavoring. Whip the cream until stiff and fold into the custard carefully. Turn the mixture into a 2-quart melon mold or other decorative mold. Chill several hours.

When ready to serve, dip the bottom of the mold in hot water, loosen edges with a spatula and invert onto a cold serving platter. Garnish with crushed strawberries or any desired fruit to blend with the liqueur used.

Suggested liqueur flavorings:

1. 4 tablespoons Tia Maria with 1 tablespoon powdered coffee dissolved in it
2. 4 tablespoons Curaçao with 2 teaspoons grated orange peel
3. 5 tablespoons Southern Comfort



Custard Sauce

⅔ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
6 egg yolks
1 quart milk
Liqueur flavoring

Combine the sugar, flour, and salt. Beat the egg yolks slightly and add to the dry ingredients. Add a small amount of the milk, mixing well so that no lumps form. Add remaining milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until the custard begins to thicken. Reduce heat and cook slowly until mixture coats a spoon. Remove from heat and allow to cool to room temperature. Add desired liqueur flavoring. Serve warm with baked apples, or liqueur soufflé, or chill and use as a sauce for poached pears or as a dessert, topped with whipped cream. Makes 2 pints sauce.

Suggested liqueur flavorings:

6 tablespoons green Chartreuse, or Tia Maria, or crème de cacao.

A soupçon set of liqueur miniatures for kitchen cooking or at-the-table flambéing can be assembled in a portable six-pack designed by H&G (for diagram and directions, see page 298). Suggested selection: anisette, orange liqueur, crème de menthe, crème de cassis, coffee liqueur, Chartreuse.

val (Victor LM-2585). It is quite an easy piece to listen to, for it consists of snippets of ideas; it is a patchwork quilt of many styles and meanings. Rachmaninoff's performance is superlative, unique in fact—one of those rare instances where the original incandescence of the artist at his best illumines the disc itself. Do not concentrate on the music: listen to the way it is played. Now play Serkin's recording of the same work (which will soon be released by Columbia Records). "Are both men playing the same piece of music?" you will ask. The answer is "Virtually, no." Both men were the same age—in their late fifties—when they recorded this work. But Rachmaninoff's performance is in the traditional "conservatory" rendition and interpretation: it was recorded forty years before Serkin's performance. Serkin belongs to our day, and his performance is an act of wisdom. He applies a brilliant mind to a musical problem. What is the piece called Carnaval? (The composer called it a suite of "darling little scenes on a four-note theme.") Rachmaninoff's and Serkin's answers to the question demonstrate the difference between responding with the heart or thinking with the head.

Now play Carnaval as performed by Charles Rosen (Epic LC 3869; BC 1269), a brilliant, young American artist. Here you will find a lack of rapport between performer and composer, a dismissal of artistic sympathy. Rachmaninoff had an affinity for Schumann by virtue of the great international melting house—the conservatory—and the musical conservatism of his times. Serkin is attuned to Schumann because of birth and cultural heritage. Rosen, you will find, is a glib stranger in the midst of romantic music. Naturally, as a child of our times, he plays fast and well, but in a field where the flowers are unnamed and the grasses without scent.

Who are the greats?

There are probably 500 concert pianists active in the world today. Some 200 are based in New York City alone, but this figure includes mavericks, such as conductor Leonard Bernstein and composer Alan Hovhaness. Of them all, only a dozen can be counted "great," in the sense of Rachmaninoff and Paderewski, men who dominated their musical generation. If people are talking about a certain pianist, it is quite likely that he exhibits some quality that sets him apart from the other 499, but everyone does not agree on the exact order of precedence among the golden few. Personal taste, mood, and feeling enter in.

There are knowledgeable areas of the public who find Serkin bleak, who see Van Cliburn as a sensation rather than a success, who count Horowitz's wrong notes, who get impatient with Novaes' long pauses, who find Glenn Gould with his mannerisms and extravagant distortions unbearable. Yet there can be no question that these are all great, very great, as pianists, artists, and personalities.

Why, you may ask, should I need to decide who is good, better, best? Aside from the obvious answer that it will increase your world of pleasure and awareness, there are three reasons. If you can recognize at first hand a great performance, you will escape bemusement in the concert hall. When you're buying a record, you can discriminate for yourself between one artist's work and another's—you can choose gods and let the half-gods go. And if you are in a position to guide and inspire would-be pianists, you can give them final goals instead of halfway marks.

Who are the top pianists of our day? Here is a list of nine, each in his own unique way, superb. If you start with these, you will set your ear to a standard of perfection against which you can measure all future piano experience. Noted beside each name on the list is a record which contains an additional lesson. In some cases, the performer is greater than the music he is playing, in some cases, vice versa. You will hear the difference between the aged-in-wood playing of maturity, and the abandoned, sometimes reckless exuberance of youth. You will observe the freedom there is in discipline, and the minute perfection that gives life to every cascade of apparently effortless sound. You will even hear flaws and clinkers, none of which diminishes the overall "greatness" of the artist. Meanwhile, you will be deriving wonderful and indestructible enjoyment from piano music, from the piano itself, and from the people who, generation after generation, keep it glowingly alive.

THE FINE ART OF OPENING WINE

While it might seem that there is little more to opening a bottle of wine than removing the cork, there is a right and a wrong way to go about it. A vintage wine is the matchless product of years of care, and rough handling that agitates it at the last critical moment before it is drunk can sadly impair it. The cork of a table wine (especially a red Bordeaux that tends to throw a sediment) should be drawn smoothly, without jerking the bottle. In the case of champagne, the cork should be eased out (never popped) so that the natural gases inside escape with a noise no louder than a sigh and the wine stays where it belongs, in the bottle, instead of foaming wastefully over the top. The expert's technique is demonstrated here by Charles Mabille, maître d'hôtel of New York's Four Seasons restaurant.

How to open champagne

1 Unwind the twisted end of the wire cap between foil and cork that holds the cork firmly in place.

2 Loosen wire cap and foil covering over cork and remove from the bottle.

SEE NEXT TO LAST PAGE FOR "WHERE YOU CAN BUY."

Tilt bottle at a slight angle. Protect hand with napkin and twist cork toward you while turning bottle clockwise with other hand.

Continue to twist gently. As cork nears top of bottle, gas inside will force it up and out.

5 To pour, hold with hand around center of bottle, index finger on neck. This gives control.

As you stop pouring, turn bottle slightly to right. This will prevent wine drips.

How to open table wine

Red table wines should be opened one to two hours before serving, other wines, a few minutes before serving. First take a sharp knife and cut foil just below rim of neck.

2 Peel foil from top of bottle, exposing cork and rim. With a cloth, carefully wipe them clean before drawing cork.

Use a good corkscrew, like this one, of the sommelier's type. Holding bottle steady with left hand, twist corkscrew into center of cork, with side wing extended.

Grasp corkscrew firmly. Brace thumb on top and press wing at side down toward bottle with index finger, to draw cork upward.

5 As cork rises, pull slowly and evenly so it emerges smoothly without jerking bottle.

Carefully wipe inside neck of bottle. Leave red wine open on table to "breathe"; contact with air develops wine, releases bouquet.

7 To serve, fill glass one-third full. Stop pouring and turn bottle slightly to right to prevent dripping.

The people who built your dishwasher * recommend that you use something besides a detergent to prevent water spots.

They recommend:

LIQUID JET-DRY®

for dishwashers with automatic dispensers for JET-DRY

LIQUID JET-DRY causes glasses, silverware and china to shed water instantly after they are rinsed. No water drops are left on the dishes to dry into unsightly water spots. Dishwasher manufacturers, recognizing JET-DRY as the answer to water spotting, equip many models to inject LIQUID JET-DRY into the rinse water. If your dishwasher is so equipped, don't run out of JET-DRY. Even one dishwashing without JET-DRY can cause spots.

SOLID JET-DRY®

for dishwashers without dispensers for JET-DRY

SOLID JET DRY is now available for dishwashers not equipped to dispense LIQUID JET-DRY. It dries dishes just as spot-free and sparkling (and just as automatically) as LIQUID JET-DRY does in dishwashers equipped with automatic dispensers. SOLID JET-DRY comes in the form of a bar which is neatly encased in a plastic basket. You simply clip the basket to any corner of the upper rack of your dishwasher. Remember to buy JET-DRY. At grocery stores and dishwasher dealers.

* JET-DRY is recommended by the manufacturers of all 28 makes of dishwashers.

to help site a house on a lot or cope with a major terrain problem. You might pick a different man—if your project is the design of a special garden—because of his knowledge of plants and his skill at handling them. Or you might pick a third because his work has become associated with a particular landscape style that appeals to you.

How to work with a landscape architect

Having found your man, you should consult him in much the same way you would consult an allergist if you were troubled with asthma. You would tell him what you had on your mind (your symptoms). He would ask you a lot of questions, then make recommendations which you would be free to accept or reject. The analogy cannot be carried too far, but like any kind of professional consultation, discourse with your landscape architect should be frank, full, and as confidential as circumstances indicate. You can freely ask him any questions you think will establish his qualifications, and, of course, you should discuss payment. Talk about fees and cost will not embarrass him and need not embarrass you. You should discuss the scope of the service you expect o (if you are expecting too muc will set you straight). And must get across just what yo pect of your landscape as w of him.

Do you, for instance, more than a pleasant settin your house? How much ma nance are you willing to cope either by yourself or with How much and what kind of is available? Do you or your ily have special interests in way of sports or games that be played on your home grou Are you a gardener—or would like to become one? Are there ticular aspects of your house that you do not like? Do you satisfactory privacy from neighbors? Would you lik screen out an unlovely view conversely, are there prospect yond your own lot line that cially please you and that would like to take advantag and make a part of your own l scape? Is money available t all the things you would like t now, or are you primarily in se of direction or a plan to be ca out at a later date?

All of these things your sultant will want to know and should tell him. Both he and you will want to hold as full an exchange of views as possible, as soon as possible, and, initially at least, on the site. In that way unnecessary letters, telephone calls, and extemporaneous changes of mind—all time-consuming and costly—will be minimized.

Some changes of mind, of course, especially in such a changeable realm as the landscape, are not only inevitable, but desirable. In an area where your own knowledge of the maintenance of your property is bound to improve with time, your plans for improvement will develop and ramify. When the need for change arises, you can look to your landscape architect for guidance. But as your own skills and experience increase, your umbilical dependence on him will lessen. Which is all to the good, since the true professional's pride and joy is a client who is not only a satisfied customer, but a discerning practitioner of many of the arts and skills he holds dear. While he is creating a landscape, a good landscape architect also stimulates his client's creativity.

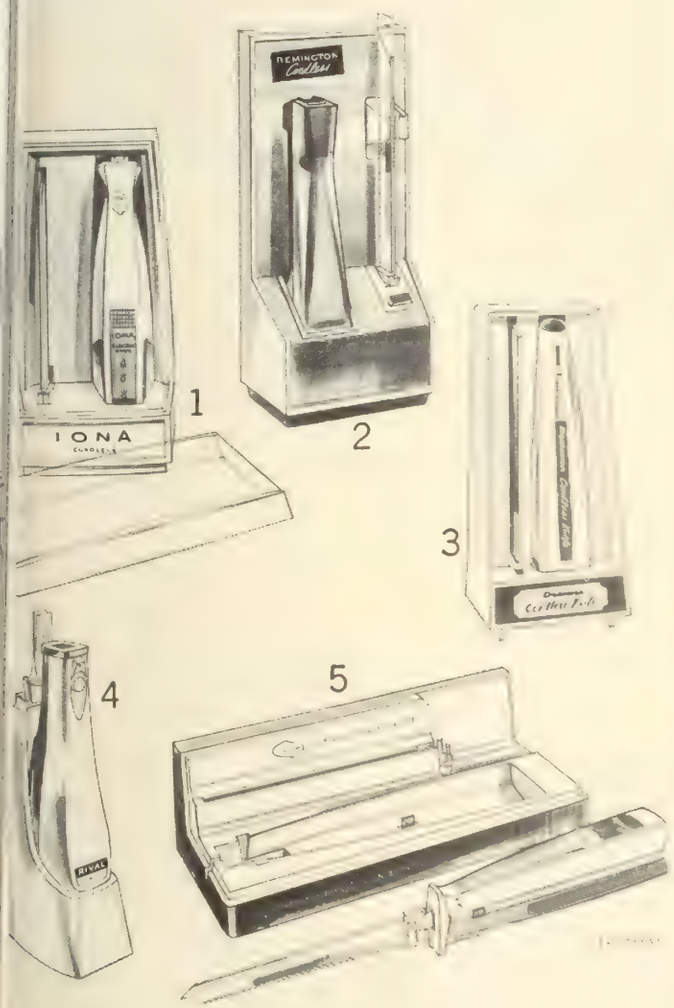
HOW TO USE AND CARE FOR AN ELECTRIC CARVING KNIFE

In the last few years a new kind of knife has been added to the carver's wardrobe—the electric carving or slicing knife. Every major appliance manufacturer makes at least one, sometimes three different models, both with and without cords. Newest and most convenient are the cordless knives that operate on batteries and recharge in a storage case that plugs into an outlet. Inexperienced carvers who in the past may have faced a gigot or a rib roast with some trepidation, doubting their ability to do more than hack the meat to pieces, have eagerly taken up these electric aids to dexterity. For while the traditional carving knife demands deftness and an assured technique, the electric knife needs only to be guided. The rapid back-and-forth movement of its matched serrated blades does the rest, producing professional-looking, even slices. To the experienced carver, the electric knife is valuable for its ability to cut swiftly through crumbly crusts such as the delicate pastry wrapping of a gigot or ham en croûte or beef Wellington without making the crust disintegrate into crumbs—a tricky procedure with a standard, straight-edged knife.

STAND-UP MODELS



Designed with cases that take up minimum space on a counter, all these electric carving knives are battery-operated. In every model except #4, which has a cord that plugs directly into the handle for recharging, the case is the charger unit and plugs into a regular AC outlet. 1. Swing-A-Way, $34.95. 2. Troy, $24.95. 3. Westinghouse, $37.95. 4. Hamilton Beach, $39.95. 5. G. E. $34.98. 6. Presto, $28.95. 7. Knapp-Monarch, $29.95.

To get the best results with an electric knife, hold the meat y with a fork and cut across the grain of the meat in uniform , merely guiding the blades and bearing down lightly. There need to exert pressure, or to saw. For very thin slices, slightly the cutting edges of the blades in toward the meat. Cut down d around any bones, but do not attempt to cut through them is will damage the blades. Always slice on a wooden board; lades will scratch china or metal as much as a regular knife. the handle of the electric knife is bulkier than that of a ard carving knife, keep it over the edge of the board or you find it difficult to guide the blade right down to the bottom of ieat. This is important, of course, only if you are slicing some- like a rolled roast or a filet of beef.

The blades of an electric knife will retain their cutting power normal use. If they do need sharpening, don't attempt to do the ourself, but return the knife to the manufacturer or the manu- rer's service center. To clean after use, simply remove the de- ible cutting blades and wash them in sudsy water. Stubborn sy or gummy spots can be scoured away with a soap-filled steel pad. Never let the knife handle come into contact with the water ou may damage the recharging unit. If it is given reasonable , your electric knife will do stalwart duty for many years.

HANG-UP MODELS

ases that hold these electric knife components can be either placed on a ounter or mounted on a wall. As each case is the recharging unit for the attery-operated knife, be sure to hang it near an outlet that is always "on." nd allow recharging time specified by each manufacturer to bring the nife to full power. 1. Iona, $34.95. 2. Remington, $34.95. 3. Dominion, $31.95. 4. Rival, $34.95. 5. Sunbeam, $39.95. All prices are approximate.

THE ELECTRIC CARVING KNIFE IN ACTION

A FAMOUS CHEF SHOWS YOU THE STEP-BY-STEP WAY TO SLICE BEEF WELLINGTON

One of the masterpieces of the chef's art—and a superb entrée for a special dinner party—is Filet of Beef Wellington, a rare roasted filet covered with a succulent mixture of duxelles (finely chopped sautéed mushrooms) and pâté de fois gras, with a puff pastry crust. The aim in carving this sumptuous dish is to cut evenly through crust, coating, and meat, without letting the slices fall apart. Here René Verdon, former White House chef and now culinary consultant to Hamilton Beach, shows how easily and surely this feat can be accomplished with the aid of an electric carving knife. Armed with this powerful implement, even an amateur can look like a past master at the art of carving.

M. EHLMANN

Arrange Filet of Beef Wellington on a wood carving board. Hold steady by pressing tines of fork lightly on crust. Slice off and discard thick piece of pastry crust at end of filet.

FOR "WHERE YOU CAN BUY" SEE HOUSE & GARDEN WHEREABOUTS, NEXT TO LAST PAGE.

Carve filet in slices 1 inch thick, pressing down lightly with knife and pulling blade back toward you as it reaches the bottom of the crust. It is not necessary to exert much pressure.

Pick up slice by sliding knife blade underneath the meat and holding it firm with the fork. Transfer slice to a serving plate and garnish each helping with a few sprigs of watercress.

At the table, the finishing touch is added—a spoonful of sauce. A rich Madeira sauce laced with finely chopped truffles is the traditional, suitably rich accompaniment to Beef Wellington.

PASTA PERSONAE FOR A CRÈCHE

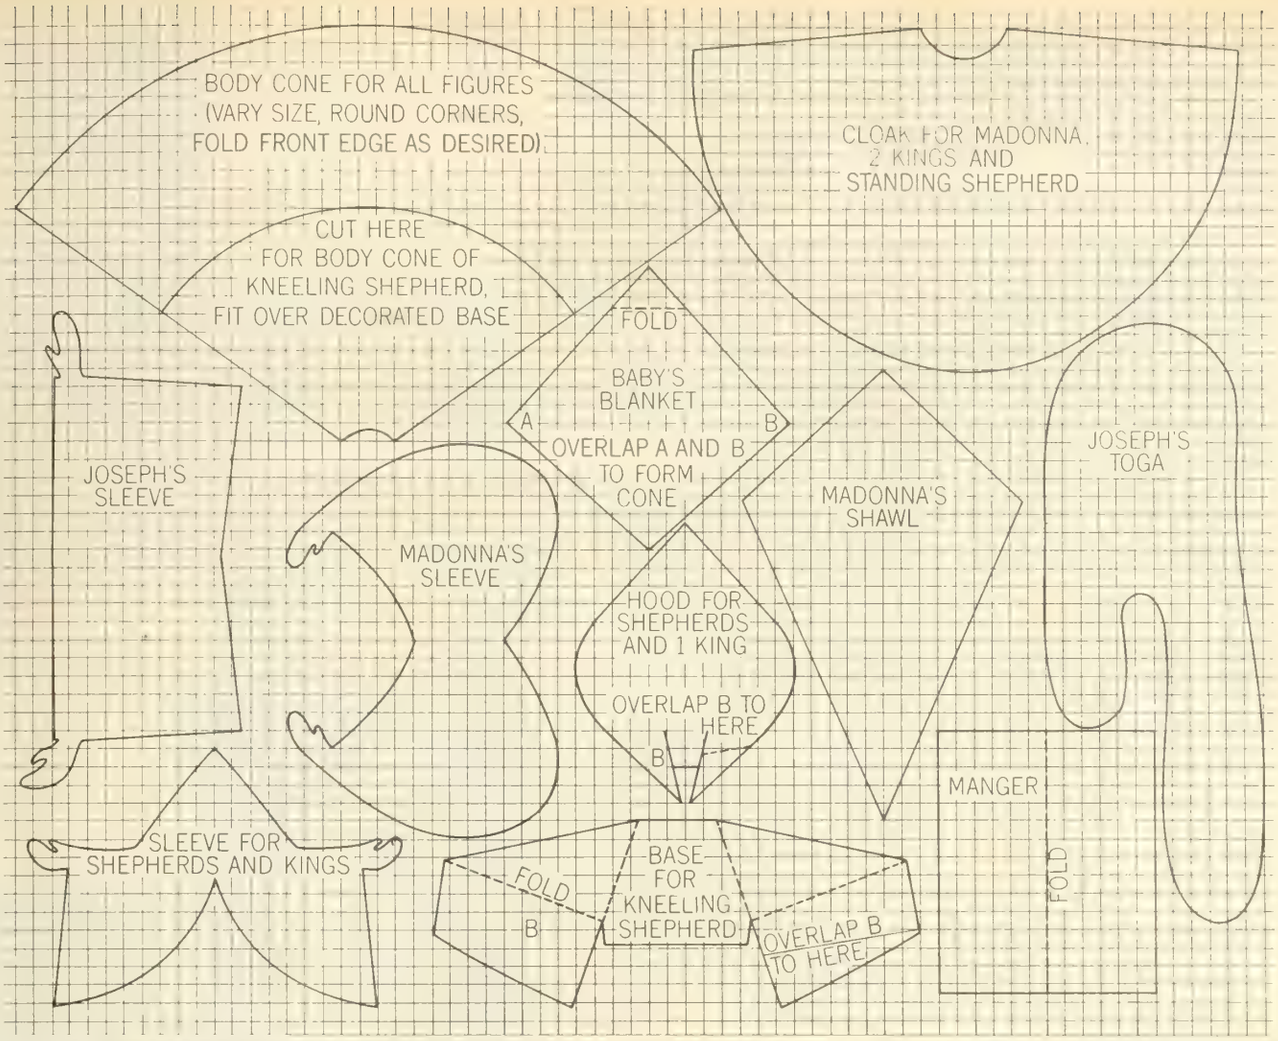
THE ENTIRE CAST ASSEMB

Spaghetti and macaroni are such humble, homely materials it is hard to imagine that they can be used to make beautiful figures for a Nativity scene. Yet from raw pasta glued over paper designer Susan Shank created this group, small enough for the mantelpiece yet not too minuscule and a labor of love for any reasonably dextrous person.

Materials you will need

Paper: white construction-weight paper for figures; ¼-inch graph paper for figure patterns
Glue: a white glue that dries hard but not brittle, such as Wilhold
Pasta: spaghetti (for bodies, cloaks, sleeves, manger); salad macaroni, smallest size — ⅛ inch in diameter (for hair, beards, trim, decoration); thinnest egg noodles (for straw in manger)
Styrofoam balls: 1-inch size for heads, smaller one for baby's head
Pipe cleaners: for attaching heads to bodies
Metallic paper: for gifts for kings to carry
Wire: for shepherds' staffs

Tools you will need



Scissors, tweezers, compass, ruler

HOW TO MAKE THE MADONNA AND JOSEPH, KINGS AND SHEPHERDS

1. For each figure, form a cone of white paper, glue to keep shape.
2. Glue on spaghetti vertically in triangular sections: cover paper with glue, place spaghetti on piece by piece, cut to desired length with scissors while glue is still wet. Always work a small section at a time.
3. Fasten head into top of cone with pipe cleaner. Bend head slightly forward and glue back of head to cone about ½ inch below tip.
4. Wrap sleeve around cone, glue in place, cover with spaghetti.
5. If making a cloaked figure, glue cloak into place and cover with spaghetti and other pasta in a pretty pattern.
6. Cover head with ringlets of salad macaroni (round side up). Use for beard as well. Tweezers are good to use in handling these small pieces.
7. If making a hooded figure, arrange paper hood over head, glue in place, and decorate with salad macaroni (cut side up) and other pastas.
8. Make kings' crowns of paper, glue into place, decorate with pasta.
9. Fashion kings' gifts of metallic paper, and glue into their hands.
10. Make shepherds' staff of wire drawn through softened spaghetti.

THE MANGER

HOW TO MAKE THE MANGER

1. Fold manger in half lengthwise as indicated on pattern. It should measure about 3 by 3½ inches before being folded.
2. To make legs: along the edge of one end, glue 4 pieces of spaghetti 2½ inches long as far as the fold, allowing them to extend 1 inch beyond the fold. On the other side of the same end of the manger, glue 4 pieces of spaghetti 1½ inches long as far as the fold, and next to those glue 4 pieces of spaghetti 2½ inches long. Repeat at the other end of manger. Cover rest of outside of manger with short pieces.
3. Cover inside of manger with spaghetti running lengthwise.
4. Glue crossbars of spaghetti to open ends of manger to keep it open—and to legs along each side to strengthen them.

HOW TO MAKE THE CHRIST CHILD

1. Curve paper blanket into cone, fold bottom under and glue.
2. Curve a small circle of paper into a cone and glue into open end of blanket to make baby's body. Cover with pasta. Fasten on small head.
3. Decorate blanket prettily with salad macaroni and other pastas.
4. Glue baby into manger. Tuck bits of thin egg noodles around to simulate straw. Fashion halo of spaghetti and salad macaroni.

• Paper pasted on bottoms of finished figures will strengthen. When group is completed and glue dried, spray with clear plastic fixitive.

What's new for living

A ROOM IN A TRUNK, Italian style. Jo Colombo, a contemporary Italian designer who believes that furniture should be as mobile as people, has been discovered by America: a sampling of his inventive storage designs has been imported for display here and may be purchased on special order. One of his ideas is a series of "fitted screens," several versions of which may be put together from the same series of components. Each version is designed to hold all the paraphernalia for a given activity, thus, in effect, turning the corner where it stands into the working equivalent of a whole room. Then when the owner is ready to move or simply to rearrange his household, he can fold up the screen, contents and all, and carry it off like a trunk. One version, below, is designed to function as a man's personal dressing room. It contains racks, drawers, or hanging space for every conceivable item in his wardrobe plus a dressing mirror, and when closed, measures 58½ by 23½ inches by 32½ inches deep. A comparable version of the same size has been designed for a woman's wardrobe. A higher, three-section screen, below, is fitted for all the equipment a man might want to have in his own personal relaxing corner—hi-fi components, books, pipes, a bar—together with lighting.

Another of designer Colombo's room-in-itself furniture designs is a kitchen cube on wheels that measures about 42 by 32 inches by 36 inches high and contains all the equipment needed for preparing a simple meal for six people—range, oven, grill, refrigerator, pots and pans, dishes, and cutlery. China compartments are specially constructed to prevent breakage while the cube is in

n. There is a special compartment for cook books and one for tractable cord that connects the stove and refrigerator to an c outlet. Since this rolling cube contains everything but the n sink, it could not quite stand in for a whole kitchen, but it well serve as a second kitchen—or outdoors as a poolside n. This, the fitted screens, and some of Mr. Colombo's chairs e ordered (and some may be seen) at D/R International, Inc., st 57th Street, New York, N. Y., 10022.

ER WINDOW SHADES. Quite apart from their decorative assets, west shades have qualities that, while not visible to the eye, are outngly practical. Two such innovations:

filium linings that keep out cold in the winter, heat in the summer. vailable on Exlite room-darkening shades by Joanna Western Mills ompany, 22nd and Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill., 60616.

cotchgard finish that wards off dirt and grime. This comes on the lighlander room-darkening shades by Illinois Division of Slick Industrial Company, Chicago Heights, Ill., 60616.

TER GAUGE that tells you when to water your plants. All you do rt the probe end of the water indicator deep into the flowerpot or eave it there long enough to register, and the dial will indicate the ire content of the soil. If the meter reads less than 40 per cent, it's o water. $14.95. By Peerless Instrument Company, 2200 West Ala- St., Houston, Tex., 77006.

PATENT-LEATHER LOOK in decorating. A new sleek gleam is ning to appear on walls and upholstered furniture. Decorators who deplored shiny paint for any rooms except kitchens and bathrooms ow covering living room walls with high-gloss lacquer. They like its ous quality, especially in dark colors (see the room on page 232), hey are quite unconcerned if it highlights minor imperfections in the hness of the surface, which it does. If you want to follow suit, a good dealer can mix an ultra-high-gloss paint in the color you want, but it be applied with a brush, not a roller. Or you can cover your walls— furniture, too—with patent-finished cotton fabric or vinyl with a backing. Both come in the maddest of op-art checks and bold floral geometric patterns as well as more subtle silk-screened designs such ite caning on a white ground.

mar Novaes: Music from szt, Chopin, Debussy (Decca /DL7 10074). The only womranking among the "greats" lights us with introspective, flective playing of incredible quisiteness.

Possibly the most perfect and discreet record ever made shows impeccable taste, control, and self-discipline within the German Romantic idiom. The song of the music, the composer's impulse, shines through, although not a note is imprecise.

Benedetti Michelangeli: Brahms Variations on a theme by Paganini (Odeon QBLP 1044). One of the most dazzling virtuoso records available. The most arresting pianist alive tackles the world's most difficult piano composition.

music, which gives the performance a stiffness, yet brilliance, that Chopin is rarely accorded. Of unusual interest for its journeyman excellence and its really glittering execution.

Glenn Gould: Bach's Two-and-Three-Part Inventions (Columbia ML 6022/MS 6622). Having exhausted the Bach classical repertoire, Gould goes back to beginners' exercises and plays them on a twenty-year-old Chickering piano, purposely, to obtain dryness and Bachishness. A record that achieves the pianist's objective and is enjoyable to listen to.

Van Cliburn: Chopin Selections (RCA Victor LM/LSC 2576). Everyone has heard "Van with orchestra." This record shows he is a radiant solo pianist, much to the surprise of his critics.

While one pianist is great for one reason, another may be equally honored for an entirely different attribute. It is Van Cliburn's sweep that draws cheers from an audience, while Gould's miniaturism elicits gasps of admiration. Richter can hold the attention of thousands of people for an unheard of span of time, while Rubinstein races you breathlessly to the end of the piece. In one case you applaud the music made, in the other you bravo the man. But all great pianists have certain qualities in common. They command the keyboard. They command your emotions. Their music surprises and delights you. Their personalities have, like it or not, something magnetic and electric about them.

Most of all, great pianists make the piano talk. Its language, fortunately, is easier than a foreign tongue. "Listen," Socrates said, "and you will hear . . . " This was spoken long before the piano was invented, but the philosopher must have been thinking of music and the men who make it.

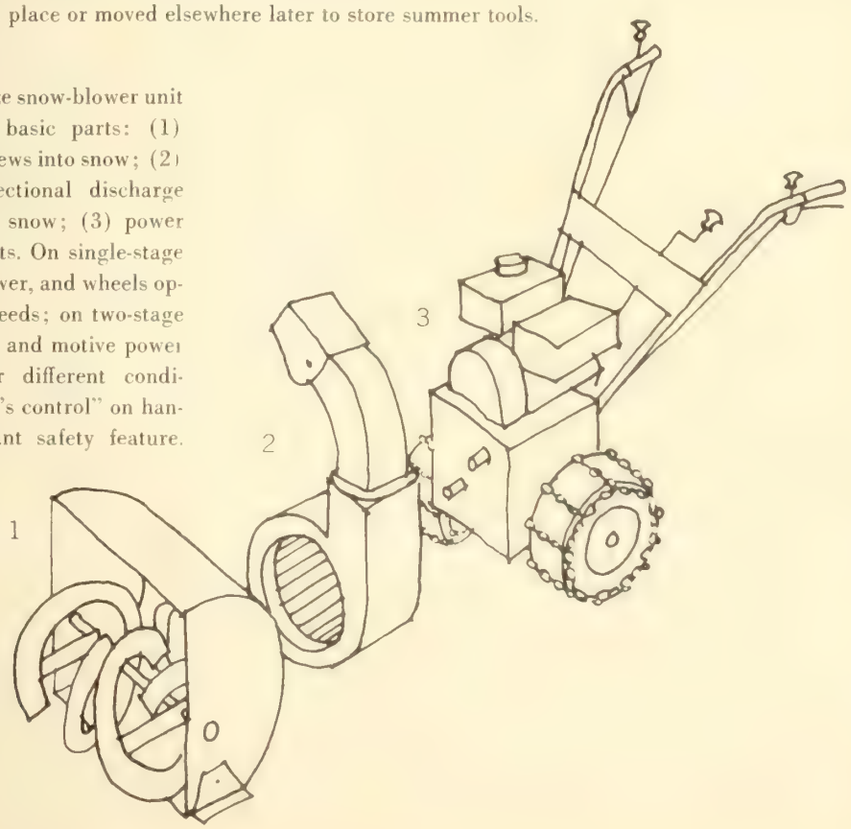
SUCCOR FOR THE SNOWBOUND

A SNOW BLOWER, STURDY, DEPENDABLE, CONVENIENT, IS A BLIZZARD'S BEST NEMESIS

"The snow," as Lowell murmured a century ago, "had begun in c gloaming, and busily all the night had been heaping field and hi way with a silence deep and white." Snow has not changed a a hundred years. But while horse-drawn man worried little about snow—s ply taking to his sleigh with a jingle of bells and a buffalo robe—mod man takes to his automobile and gets stuck in his own driveway.



Why does twentieth-century man get snowbound in his driveway? cause his highly efficient, modern, powerful snow blower is trapped in back of the garage by his automobile. And how can he avoid getting st in his driveway every time it snows? By keeping his snow blower where can use it when he needs it. The man above keeps his in a small metal sh bought knocked down at a department store and set up right around the c ner from the garage door, where it can remain all year or be moved elsewh come spring to serve as a tool shed. The whole point: the snow blowe parked between the automobile and the snow, where it belongs.

Now about the snow blower itself: it is a highly perfected mach these days, consisting typically of three essential elements (see explo diagram, opposite page): the cutting or plowing auger, the impeller a removal chute, and the power plant that actuates and moves the whole thi For use around houses, such a device has largely (Continued on page 32

A portable tool shed just big enough to house a modern snow blower can be bought at most good department stores or from a mail-order catalogue. If you place the shelter where blower will be readily accessible (rather than trapped behind the automobiles at the back of the garage), it will be ready to go to work where the snow most needs to be removed. Shed can be left in place or moved elsewhere later to store summer tools.

Typical home-size snow-blower unit consists of three basic parts: (1) snow auger that chews into snow; (2) impeller and directional discharge chute for loosened snow; (3) power for all moving parts. On single-stage models, auger, blower, and wheels operate at related speeds; on two-stage machines, removal and motive power are separate (for different conditions). "Dead man's control" on handle is an important safety feature.

supplanted the bulldozer blades that formerly were used for heavy snow plowing. And of course shoveling snow by hand is a completely discredited pastime except for the young (there is good medical reason to believe that heavy exertion in too warm clothing can be dangerous to adults over forty). The special virtue of the blower is that it may be had in a model to cut a 16-inch swath as well as one 3 feet wide. Since this device eats its way into the snow rather than merely pushing against it, it is less likely itself to become snowbound. And because it will throw even fairly heavy snow several yards to one side, the disposal problem is seldom troublesome.

Some snow blowers are known as two-stage types, some single-stage. The former are almost invariably better adapted to wider swaths, more flexible use, a greater variety of snows (not just light and dry, but heavy and wet, packed or crusted). With this type, the auger that bores into the snow works as one element, and the impeller that takes the snow from the auger and blows it away works as another, but related, element. The pusher, which provides the power for the whole shebang—wheels, auger, and blower—carries the engine and all the controls. It may offer several forward wheel speeds, independent of auger and blower speed, and one or two reverse speeds for backing out of corners and big drifts. Tire chains are almost always helpful except in very light dry snows. In the single-stage self-powered models, auger and blower speeds are in constant relationship to wheel speeds. Push-it-yourself units are also available. With these, only the auger and blower are powered, and only very light work should be attempted. This year, several new lightweight (20 pounds or so) gasoline and electric models are coming on the market. They are really animated snow-shovels, requiring much the same effort to operate as a chain saw, and carry a price tag averaging around $100. They will do a surprisingly good job—especially on porches and steps—if you don't ask too much of them.

If you live in real snow country, a well-made snow-blower unit, probably a two-stage model, may be one of the most useful (and perhaps economical) pieces of equipment you can buy. To hire a man with a tractor can cost as much as $10 for an ordinary beside-the-house driveway. (The ambitious small boy with the shovel, if he still exists, also knows the value of his labor.) So if the power lawn mower is public garden machine number one, then for at least a fifth of American households, the snow blower may well rank nu ber two.

Assuming you are shopp for your first home-size sn blower, there are certain valua features you should look for. Ma sure your machine has a reve gear (if only for maneuvering unit in and out of storage), "dead man's control" that is ope tive at least when the unit is reverse (so that if you slip and lease the handle, the machine w stop in its tracks), a winteriz engine (important for occasion use in bitter temperatures), a d charge chute whose direction c be easily controlled from yo normal operating position (y will need to blow a stream of sn the wrong way only once to kn how important this can be). A by all means make sure the mod you choose has an auger sco whose height is adjustable.

Most of the dozen or so rep table makers of these machin have long since taken the bugs o of their lines. They may manufa ture lightweight or low-perfor ance models for competitive re sons or to do light removal jo that must not be done by hand. B their standard machines are a most without exception of depen able quality and more than ad quate power (four to six hors power on the average). Luxuriou touches will vary with size an price (self-starters, headlight drift cutters, sometimes call "third stages," protective hood for the operator are four option features that may appeal to i dividual purchasers).

Prices? Not much more tha the cost of a power lawn mower o comparable quality and perfo mance.

The secret of successful sno removal now, as always, is gettin the jump on the storm. Pay heed t your weather reports and star plowing (or blowing) when th first inch or two has fallen. I may be profitable to plow the sam ground three or more times durin a single storm. And to do this you snow blower must be kept handy and operable. This means a goo machine, bought from a reputabl dealer, kept in good shape (with a spring or summer checkup as a matter of routine), and housed where you can get at it with a minimum of fuss and effort.

Notes for November gardeners

"No warmth, no cheerfulness' no healthful ease,
No comfortable feel in any member—
No shade, no shine, no butterflies, no bees,
No fruits, no flowers, no leaves, no birds,
November!" —THOMAS HOOD

First weekend

o problem. For maybe half the ountry's gardening population, ie eleventh month is indeed the eventh hour for outdoor activity. ut the transition to the indoors is a easy one, and pleasant—cranky ritish poets to the contrary notithstanding. Since your last outoor assignment is likely to have een the planting of the late-ordered spring-flowering hardy ulbs, a good first assignment when ou come indoors is to start a few f the non-hardy but durable bulbs iat are such a joy in winter winows. One of the prettiest of these, house plant all the way, is the frican Veltheimia capensis (often atalogued as V. viridifolia—and oodness knows its lovely ruffled eaves are surely viridian enough). he yearly spike of droopy orangeinkish florets is no great shakes, ut the big rosettes of arching, ippled, pointed leaves are beautiul for months. The papery bulbs hould be planted in a pot about wice the bulb's greatest diameter, sing a sandy pot-loam. They grow est when crowding the pot. After lowering, when growth dries off, the leafless bulbs should be stored all summer completely dry. As fall shoots start again, bring them to the light and water them.

Nerines (if you have one, you have more than one) are pretty little bulbs that multiply rapidly, flower (indoors) in late fall. The pink blooms of the best variety (get any form of N. bowdenii you can locate) are airy and graceful. Separate the crowding bulbs every few years, in late summer after a long dry rest period.

Crinum and amaryllis are closely related, grow in similar fashion, produce straplike leaves from long-necked big bulbs. Crinum flower clusters produce smaller florets than the big swinging trumpets of the amaryllis. But both have a considerable color range, from pure white to pinks and strong reds. Both are best rested over summer (although they don't require rest if they are put outside and kept watered and lightly shaded). Of the two, crinum is more appealing, makes ultimately a far bigger plant. Amaryllis is bolder, more dramatic, less tractable even during its shorter period of bloom.

Cyclamen indoors can be a delight or a heartbreaker, and you can't tell in advance which it will be. They are almost hardy in temperate climates (some species, such as C. neapolitanum, are indeed, even under northeastern snows). The size of the blossoms vary from the big butterfly blooms the florists offer to dainty flowers no bigger than a fingernail. The secret, if there is one secret, to growing cyclamen well is keeping them cool when they are in flower (50 degrees at night is fine) and hot and dry in summer, when they rest—which they all do at one time or another. Strictly speaking, cyclamen is a better bet in a greenhouse than in a plant window. But if you like challenges, see what you can do indoors.

A non-bulb that still acts like a bulb is the great evergreen clivia, with fans of opposed straplike leaves, huge ropy roots, and unfailing annual orange-yellow flower spikes. The umbels of small lily-like trumpets are handsome enough, but the deep green foliage is still handsomer. Clivias need repotting only when the roots crack the old pot (well, almost).

Second weekend

And put out the cat. The only good thing you can say about cleaning out the garden shelves, come winter, is that the general catharsis such a performance represents is better than kicking tin cans or shouting at the children. If you drag a big rubbish barrel to the tool shed or garage or wherever you store your horticultural impedimenta, you will be surprised how quickly you can fill it. Most liquid pesticides will lose some effectiveness over any winter—may be useless if they are frozen, even if the bottles don't break. Dry insect powders may cake and are seldom worth keeping except in vapor-tight containers. Old half-cans of paint might just as well be thrown out now—you'll never get to use them in spring. Fertilizers will last well only if they are kept dry. The nitrogen in most mixtures will deliquesce during damp weather. That leads to caking and that indicates the loss of the nitrogen. (Pelletized and most urea-form compounds will keep better, but all should be stored in a dry place, summer as well as winter.) All bottles and cans on the pesticide shelf from which labels have disappeared or on which directions have become illegible should be given the heave-ho. In tossing out aerosols, be sure not to crush or puncture them lest a dangerous explosion result. It's a good idea to turn old aerosols upside down, push the button, and let the energizing gas exhaust itself before throwing the can away.

Perhaps it is hard now to realize there is no future for most of the junk you accumulate. But next year you'll never miss it.

Third weekend

Indoor pesticides. Some but not all the pesticide formulations you used in the open garden last summer can be kept for indoor use. A better bet would be to buy either fresh aerosol sprays recommended for use on indoor plants or to make up sprays as you need them from fresh basic materials or concentrated solutions. These you can apply to almost any house or greenhouse plant with an armory of not more than three pieces of equipment: a two-hand pump sprayer, a one-hand atomizer sprayer (both these for liquids), and a small hand-pump duster. The "flit-gun" type of sprayer will do for any solution. The atomizers, say of one-pint as well as one-hand capacity, will be especially useful for applying water mist to plant foliage. They are also fine for getting rubbing alcohol, spiked with a little malathion, into the hiding places of mealy-bugs—just in case you happen to let an infestation get started. Theoretically (and often in practice), the alcohol will dissolve the insect's waxy, downy coating, and the malathion will make the kill.

All the sprays safe to use on plants indoors can and should be rinsed from your equipment. Small sprayers simply will not operate unless they are kept clean.

Fourth weekend

Synthetic pot soil. One of this department's annual exercises is recommending either a different kind of pot plant soil mix or a different method of mixing an old one. And, in truth, of potting soils there is no end. At the moment, we suggest that the simplest thing to do may be to prepare, in advance of the indoor season, a few bushels of—well, stuff—in which you need to indulge in no guesswork and to prepare which, you need no compost shredder, no cement mixer, no heavy equipment. While we have long had the greatest admiration for the results English gardeners obtain with the use of the John Innes composts (J. I. No. 1 includes: seven parts of friable loam, three parts of coarse peat, two parts of sharp sand, the latter laced with hoof meal, horn shavings, and super-phosphate with a dash of potash and a pinch of ground chalk). But the preparation of the J. I. P.'s, as they are known, is beyond our competence and patience. So unless you are in a finicky mood, we suggest a mixture (7-3-2 if you insist) of peat or peatmoss, sand, and dried cattle manure. What you are after is a basic mixture that can be exactly duplicated and that is neither too heavy to be stored easily or too unstable to last long in storage.

There are useful variants, of course, but you can keep exact track of all of them. For example, for half the peat you might well substitute vermiculite. Or you could use only one-third of the peat, one-third of the vermiculite, and one-third perlite for the humus-forming ingredient. Sharp sand is sharp sand (builder's sand, not fine beach sand or gravel). The shredded manure, bought in a bag, is always the same.

In practical use, synthetic pot soils are ideal for almost any plant, provided you are willing to add an extra amount of one or another ingredient for particular plants (more peat for azaleas, say, and more sand for succulents) and provided you understand that supplements of fertilizer will be regularly required (diluted liquid plant foods will serve beautifully). Anyway, try the synthetic mix. Then if you don't like it, wait—we'll give you a new one next year.

THE OUTDOOR PLANTING ALSO REFLECTS JAPANESE IDEAS

At the front of the house, the landscaping is Japanese in spirit, but the plants are Northwestern. Rhododendron, pine, California moss, and juniper keep the grounds almost maintenance free. Giant madrona tree on site was incorporated into plans for house and garden.

PAER

The garden between the house and the swimming pool is a simple arrangement of smooth river rocks and groundcover, kept low so as not to interfere with view of Puget Sound.

Japanese garden outside the entrance hall is planted around a moss-covered berm that builds up the ground level to protect the madrona tree behind it, and screens the front of the house from the driveway.

the foregoing purposes. Hardy orange (Poncirus trifoliata), Pfitzer juniper, and small-leaved varieties of English ivy similarly lend themselves to specialized espalier treatment.

Just as the beauty of espaliered trees was really a by-product of the intensive cultivation of fruit, so the revelation of unsuspected attributes of many familiar plants has resulted from the application of espalier training procedures. In fact, the simple exercise of espaliering techniques has become for many gardeners an absorbing pursuit in itself—a virtuosity that is within anyone's reach. While fruit trees are still among the species most easily adapted to training, the fruit itself may no longer be the principal objective. Blossoms, normally fostered by the orchardist as the essential precursor of fruits, are, as often as not, the culmination of an espalier's seasonal performance. Any fruit or berries that result are for the most casual kind of harvesting—if not literally for the birds.

Basic beginnings

Once the novice becomes familiar with the growing habits of a tree, the measures used to train it and the proper ways to maintain it come easily. The mechanics of growth in woody plants depend on the absorption of moisture and dissolved nutrients on the part of the roots, which in turn deliver the solution to the leaves. There, in the presence of sunlight and chlorophyl, food is manufactured and returned to the plant tissues, to foster growth during the current season and supply a reserve for the production of next year's flowers and fruit (fruit, berries, or seeds—they are all the same to a plant). Every part of the espaliering procedure follows from an understanding of this cyclic principle, and it is not hard to translate this into the basic steps of espaliering.

A double horizontal cordon (two pairs of arms, parallel to the ground, growing from either side of a main trunk) can be created in two years. In the third year the tree can bear fruit. A one-year whip or "maiden" tree, grafted on a dwarfing rootstock (so specified in dealers' catalogues), will exhibit a restrained habit of growth that will be more easily brought into the desired form, with the end product more easily kept under control, than if "standard" trees are bought. The tree should be planted in early spring, either in a permanent location or one convenient for training (the espaliered tree may be successfully transplanted later). Set posts tall enough to carry two horizontal wires at a 30-inch total height and far enough apart—8 feet, say—(include the cordon between them. Your tree should stand just in front of the wires and midway between the posts. Immediately after planting, cut off the top leader of the whip about 15 inches from the ground (diagram 1), just above one bud that will form a new leader. The next two nearly opposite buds on the whip will form the first set of arms. With your thumb, rub off all buds below these three.

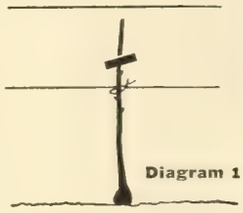

Diagram 1

During the first growing season, as the new leader and the two opposed arms develop from the three top buds, tie each to a thin bamboo cane which in turn should be tied to the wires. The new leader should, of course, be vertical and the two arms kept to a Y form for the present (diagram 2). Allow no other new growth to develop during the season on the main stem. And prune back side growth on the three new stems to leave only two buds on each shoot. Begin this policing routine about mid-July and continue it until mid-August. The first summer is devoted to structure, not fruit.

By autumn the first pair of arms (the arms of the Y) can be tied down to the lower wire. The vertical leader is of course already tied to the cane between the first and second wires. After leaf fall, the tips should be cut back a few inches just beyond upward-facing buds in order to induce thickness in the remaining growth (diagram 3). Early the second spring, cut back the leader to force two nearly opposite buds for the second horizontal tier.

The second season, of course, will see the repetition of the bracing and tying process for the two new horizontal arms. There will be no new leader, since the two topmost buds left after the spring cutback are those that are to develop into the upper arms, held in position by crossed bamboo canes (diagram 4). The second season also sees the emergence of fruiting wood (spurs that will produce flowers and fruits) on the basic structure. Control growth on the new arms as you did that on the first summer's arms. Such summer pruning provides the greatest control of form and induces the early formation of fruiting wood (as distinct from the early spring pruning, which promotes new vegetative growth). By removing excessive leaf growth during the growing season, the vigor of the tree is restrained and directed into the areas where flower and fruit buds will develop.

Annual maintenance

All espaliers require a certain amount of yearly care. The routine, never drastic, is spread out over the season in short spurts of attention, depending on the number of espaliers you have under development and the meticulousness of your approach to them. Unlike the tree or shrub growing under ordinary garden conditions, which is pruned principally in the autumn, winter, or spring (depending upon kind and use), espaliers are pruned mostly during and throughout the summer. Since late winter or early spring pruning is essential to the vigorous growth of new branches during the ensuing spring and summer, an espalier in the making does need early attention. But once the main structure has been formed according to the general principles above—which are basically the same for all the espalier patterns, however varied or ramified—all new side shoots (termed laterals on espaliers just as on roses) should be shortened to not more than 6 inches. The form of the espalier will thus be kept sharply defined and the development of flowers and fruit will be promoted.

Fertilizing and spraying are easily accomplished because of the espalier's compact form. Fertilizers low in nitrogen are best unless such symptoms as orange-red leaves and/or undersize fruit indicate nitrogen deficiency. In well-prepared ground, this is not likely to be a problem. Spraying with a combination fungicide-insecticide formulated for fruit trees (or trees and shrubs generally) is best done fortnightly during the growing season and on a regular schedule. Waiting for troubles to become apparent may prevent thorough control. Ten or fifteen espaliers can be sprayed with a 2½ gallon over-the-shoulder sprayer in about ten minutes, not counting mixing and clean-up time for the spray tank.

Adapting the rules

All espaliering procedures applicable to fruit-bearing plants may be adapted to any other ornamental species having similar habit of growth. Yews, for example, respond best to fan-pruning rather than to the cordons or U-shapes of the traditional espalier. Cotoneasters often lend themselves to informal espalier modifications especially against plain walls where their texture will be particularly pleasing. Plants with both strong branch structure and compact foliage, such as firethorn and Japanese holly, will lend themselves equally well to fan or espalier pruning—or, for that matter, to free-form patterns of almost limitless variety. And of course it is in variety that the practice of espaliering comes into its own. More than most gardening practices, the techniques of espaliers are a fascinating preoccupation in their own right. Yet it must be obvious by now that this is not the complete story on the fine points of espalier form or technique. Where, then, does the enthusiast acquire proficiency and versatility in what can amount to a fine horticultural art? From books? Alas, few modern works go into much detail. But try your local library. The old books are more of antiquarian or historical interest—although they may illustrate many handsome espalier forms. There are, however, two good ways open to the beginner. One is to scout out and haunt the accomplished enthusiasts. You will find at least one in every community where interest in plants and gardens is conspicuous. The other way is by the simple process of making a start, keeping several new plants always in training, and observing the results of your efforts—including, not least, your mistakes.

What's new for living

IN THE BALLROOM NAMED IN HER MEMORY, PORTRAIT OF THE LATE SUSAN EDWARDS WAGNER HANGS OVER A RARE SALEM MAHOGANY SOFA THAT WAS MADE FOR THE ASTOR FAMILY, 1790-1800.

ELEGANT EXPANSION FOR A CHERISHED LANDMARK. Like hundreds of other families throughout the nation, the families of New York City's mayors—John V. Lindsay and his four immediate predecessors—have been desperately in need of more space. Since 1942, the official mayoral residence has been Gracie Mansion, a comfortable but unpretentious white clapboard house built around 1798 in graceful Georgian style. Ample enough for private family living, it was sadly inadequate for the official demands of a big city's chief executive, did not even afford him an office-at-home. Now Gracie Mansion has sprouted a new wing specifically designed to relieve the first family's living room, dining room, and kitchen of daily pressure from business conferences and official entertaining. On the lower level of the one-story-and-basement addition are a mayoral office, conference room, press room, and coat room. The upper level includes a drawing room, dining room, kitchen, and pantries plus a ballroom named in memory of the late Susan Edwards Wagner, former Mayor Robert Wagner's first wife, who felt the mansion properly belonged to the city's citizens and made it available almost daily for use by civic and philanthropic groups.

Although Mrs. Wagner is credited with having first suggested the wing, extraordinary credit goes to those who carried it out. First to the architect, Mott B. Schmidt, who designed an addition that is not only completely harmonious with the original, but graced by delicate architectural detail all but indistinguishable from its prototype. Second, to the interior designer, Mrs. Francis Henry Lenygon, who chose the clear, light, elegant colors and arranged the furnishings—many of them specially donated museum-caliber antiques—and the portraits of famous New Yorkers loaned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Third, to the people (possibly the most deserving of all) who paid the bill—a committee of citizens and non-political organizations who raised $800,000 to give New York a new landmark, a model of classic architecture and decorating, that it can well be proud of.

LA SCALA IN NORTH AMERICA. Milan's famous opera company will cross the Atlantic next year to make its new world debut at Expo '67 in Montreal. Other world-famous music, drama, and dance companies to appear or be heard on this continent during the Montreal world's fair include: Vienna State Opera; Belgium's Ballet du Vingtième Siècle; France's Comédie St. Etienne and La Gendarmerie Française (at one time Napoleon's Imperial Guard); Germany's Hamburg State Opera and Munich Bach Choir; Sweden's Stockholm Royal Opera (Ingmar Bergman's production of Stravinsky's The Rake's Progress); Tunisia's Troupe Nationale Folklorique Tunisienne. Additional entertainment and spectaculars scheduled for the fair's six-month run (April 29 through October 28, 1967): National Theatre Company of Britain with Laurence Olivier, a Canadian 1,700-man military searchlight tattoo, an international soccer tournament, Russia's Red Army Chorus.

Most of the World Festival of entertainment will be staged in theatres outside the exhibition grounds to save visitors the expense of double admission tickets. Performances are scheduled in three modern theatres of the Place des Artes, the brand new Expo Theatre (for film festivals), and the 25,000-seat Automotive Stadium, now under construction. For information about tickets, it is not too early to write to Expo '67, Box Office, Royal Bank Building, Place Villiers Marie, Montreal, Canada.

[illegible] AVAILABLE [illegible] AN EARLY PAINTING BY JACKSON POLLOCK

A SERVICE FOR ARMCHAIR COLLECTORS. As a member of a new organization the Select Arts Society, you can browse the art galleries and museums of the world without ever leaving home. A group of New York City gallery owners, rare book dealers, and other experts in esoterica will provide you—via the Society—with information of interest to collectors in many fields. For an annual membership fee of $15, you will receive a monthly folio that lists such desirable items currently available in the art world as: a letter written by Napoleon Bonaparte, a rare, spoken arts record, original lithographs signed by Matisse, ancient Egyptian faïence beads, a leaf from a medieval illuminated manuscript. The Society attempts to interest new as well as experienced collectors. Prices for art works may range from $1 to $400 and higher. In the case of one-of-a-kind artifacts, preference is given to the member whose order bears the earliest postmark. Other membership perquisites: a monthly newsletter, "The Skilled Collector"; arranged art tours abroad. For further information, write to: Select Arts Society, 200 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10017.

LA BANQUE FOR THE AFFLUENT. Private European banking houses have nothing on the La Banque Continentale which opened recently in New York. Looking like an elegant Parisian town house, this prestige office, which offers its gilt-edged members personal services not available at commercial banks, is a branch of the Franklin National Bank. Member-depositors, who must keep a minimum $25,000 account and be approved by a board of governors, enjoy banking in a luxurious atmosphere that begins with being greeted by a host in cutaway and striped trousers. The bank's interiors are furnished throughout with authentic eighteenth century French antique furniture, carpets, and works of art. Mrs. Ellen McCluskey, who designed the interiors, chose browns, oranges, and blues for the reception and business areas; pink, blue, and gold for the Ladies Salon. Special services include six-day-a-week banking hours, personal accounting and bookkeeping, evening vault and safe-deposit hours (handy for putting milady's jewels back after the ball), and delivery of cash to residences in Manhattan. Checks are engraved in gold and black. La Banque Continentale is at 785 Fifth Avenue, at 60th Street, New York, N. Y., 10022.

WELSH WHEEL BAROMETER

On the face of my barometer is the name A. Taroni, Llanelly. I believe the instrument came from England and would like to know its age and any other pertinent facts.

D.T.F.—New Rochelle, N. Y.

You have a type of siphon barometer called a wheel barometer, first made in 1665. The elaborate case dates it in the last half of the eighteenth century when barometers were considered important pieces of furniture. Llanelly, where the maker of your barometer apparently lived, is a seaport situated in Carmarthenshire, Wales.

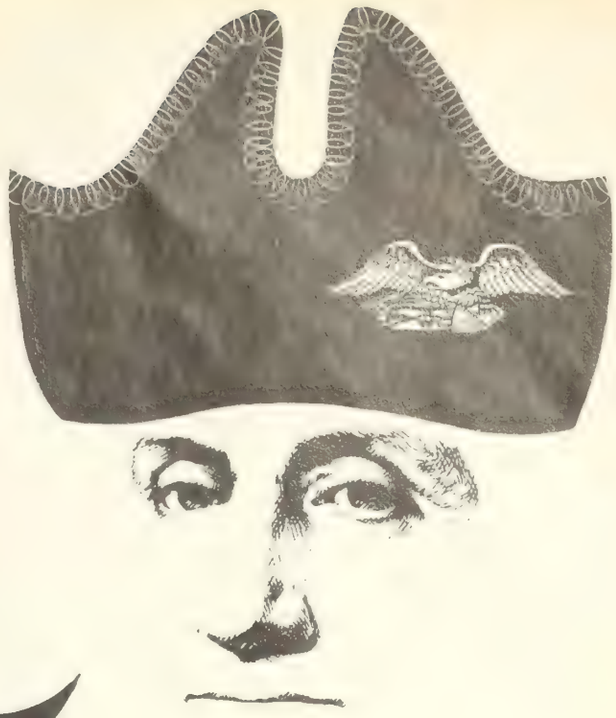
SCOTCH GRANDFATHER CLOCK

I'd like to trace the history of my mahogany grandfather clock. The name J. Breakenrig Edinburgh appears on the face.

L.B.—Mountainside, N. J.

J. Breakenrig, who worked in Edinburgh from 1767 to 1800, made the clock's movement. A cabinetmaker, probably a contemporary, made the tall case about 1790.

ENGLISH PEWTER



Please advise me as to the age and origin of this pewter plate, one of several I possess. I am also enclosing a photograph of their mark.

T.W.—Brooklyn, N. Y.

The mark is that of Samuel Ellis, a tinsmith who worked in London between the years 1771 and 1773. Continued on page 19

The American Institute of Antiques Taught Me!

...they can Teach You too!

AN EXCITING BUSINESS or HOBBY OPPORTUNITY FOR EVERYONE!

The American Institute of Antiques proudly presents Profit and Pleasure Home Study Course of Antiques. "Knowledge of Antiques has always been a sign of culture."

Develop your creative abilities in antiques . . . A school of high ideals and established responsibility announces a new home study course in antiques. Prepared by knowledgeable experts and teachers. A well-planned individual instruction program for professional or personal use. This beneficial training also provides an excellent starting point for a career for those with a creative talent and interest in antiques.

We know that many men and women who could become interested in antiques — never do. Some are uncertain of their interest and don't have a reliable way of finding out if it's worth developing. Many, who are sure of their ability, simply can't get top-notch professional training without leaving their homes or giving up their jobs.

Several years ago we decided to do something about this problem. We started The American Institute of Antiques to help people everywhere acquire the knowledge, and craftsmanship it takes to break into antiques . . . and to pass on to them valuable facts for achieving success in this wonderful field.

Our curriculum includes, Period Styles in European and North American furniture, glass, china, restoration and scores of other subjects all relating to antiques.

There are no classes . . . no wasted time! The books are profusely illustrated with diagrams, sketches, and drawings. Tested, step by step . . . under the guidance of qualified instructors. Diploma awarded. There is a low tuition fee with easy payments.

Recorded Lectures: Included with our extensive plan are recorded lectures on antiques. The records are L.P.'s and may be played on any standard machine.

Antique Book Club: As a special offer to all of our students, they may purchase at discount prices any of the books offered through our Book Club. Membership is absolutely free to all students.

Valuable Aids: Fifteen valuable aids are included with the actual course itself.

Send for your copy of "Profits & Pleasure in Antiques" Brochure

Our students are from all over the United States and abroad. Here is what some students and graduates say . . .

"This was the second time I ever exhibited at an antique show. The success was unbelievable during the week of the show. I made a profit of over $1,834.42."
Mrs. Purcell, (Canada)

"I was very happy to receive my diploma. It will be framed and placed in my shop." Mrs. Vanata, (Illinois)

"You have never met me, nor I you, but I would like to say that the American Institute of Antiques is the finest, thorough and most comprehensive course anyone in this country can take today. That is if they wish to cover all phases of antiques and to broaden their horizons."
George F. Billmeyer, (Des Moines, Iowa)

"Your course is most interesting and I am enjoying and learning a great deal from it." P. Harvey, (New York)

"I have loved antiques all my life. Your course is extremely good. Please excuse any problems I may have with my English." C. A. Guiway, (Uruguay)

"The sale of antiques as a result of studying your plan has paid for an addition on our house. Many of my friends have also become my very best customers."
Mrs. G. B. Ollinger, (Florida)

"I enjoyed both parts of the course and you can be assured that I received pleasure from the profits I have made on the few genuine antique pieces purchasd for my own use . . . Your course increased my general knowledge of antiques. I can now converse intelligently with other antique enthusiasts." Mrs. Forrest A. McCall, (Pennsylvania)

We're Looking for People Who Like Antiques!

It takes a hefty walrus to make them this beautiful.

Up in Alaska the Eskimos love us. And why not? We're one of their best customers.

Each year we order hundreds of pounds of Alaskan walrus hide. We think there's nothing like it for buffing sterling.

Frank Loin can tell you. He's been doing it for twenty-three years.

First he rubs fine volcanic pumice on, say, a fork. Then he works it against a wheel covered with a heavy layer of hide.

He never rushes. There's another buffing next. There are washes. There are inspections. But Frank never rushes.

He knows it takes time to get the kind of finish we want. One that's worthy of our "IS" maker's mark. Pick up a piece of our sterling and you'll see what we mean. There's only one way to get that kind of finish.

It takes a skilled old hand. And a hefty old walrus.

You can save $65 over open-stock prices when you buy the Bride's Set.

You get a 44-piece service for 8 in a handsome walnut finish chest. And you pay only $370 for Royal Danish. And only $320 for Prelude and Mademoiselle.

If you'd like a free color brochure showing all our patterns, just write to The International Silver Company, Meriden, Connecticut.

ANTIQUES continued from page 16

I recently purchased a chair that looks exactly like a Windsor chair, but is made of iron. Is it unusual?

V.B.P.—Verona, N. J.

IRON WINDSOR

When iron garden furniture began to appear around 1840, it was often made in imitation of popular wooden furniture designs. Your hoop-back Windsor chair probably dates around 1850-1870.

FAMOUS DANISH PLAQUE

Could you identify this wooden plaque that originally decorated a bed?

P.G.P.—La Marque, Tex.

Your carving is a reproduction of a widely copied marble plaque by the Danish sculptor, Albert Thorwaldsen (1770–1844), and dates about 1860–1870.

I would appreciate any information concerning this drum which has been handed down in my husband's family, apparently from the American Revolution. O.J.W.—Van Wert, Ohio

AMERICAN MILITARY DRUM

This may well be a Revolutionary War drum as its shape and looks match that of a number of such drums in museums. Militia flags often decorated the drum sides.

AMERICAN SHERATON SIDEBOARD

Anything you can tell me about my small cherry sideboard with acanthus carved skirt and legs will be appreciated.

W. S. C.—Valparaiso, Ind.

Your sideboard table has features of the Sheraton style and was made in the United States c. 1830.

VICTORIAN FISH KNIFE

I would like to know the age of my large knife with decorated silver blade and bone-color handle. There is a matching fork with a little less detail. A.V.—Wilton, Conn.

Your knife and fork are plated silver from an English fish set, made about 1880–1890 by E. Howard & Son of Sheffield, England. The firm is still in business.

What can you tell me about my porcelain vases and bowl? They are vividly enameled with flowers and figures. V.E.S.—Hampton, Va.

ROSE MEDALLION PORCELAIN

Your porcelains are Rose Medallion made in Canton, China. Cantonware was a popular import in the 1800's.

SHE NEEDS YOUR LOVE

Little Mie-Wen in Formosa already knows many things . . . the gnawing of hunger . . . the shivering of fear . . . the misery of being unwanted.

But she has never known love. Her mother died when she was born. Her father was poor—and didn't want a girl child. So Mie-Wen has spent her baby years without the affection and security every child craves.

Your love can give Mie-Wen, and children just as needy, the privileges you would wish for your own child.

Through Christian Children's Fund you can sponsor one of these youngsters. We use the word sponsor to symbolize the bond of love that exists between you and the child.

The cost? Only $10 a month. Your love is demonstrated in a practical way because your money helps with nourishing meals . . . medical care . . . warm clothing . . . education . . . understanding housemothers . . .

And in return you will receive your child's personal history, photograph, plus a description of the orphanage where your child lives. You can write and send packages. Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(If you want your child to have a special gift— a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear—you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

Will you help? Requests come from orphanages every day. And they are urgent. Children wrapping rags on their feet, school books years out of date, milk supplies exhausted, babies abandoned by unwed mothers.

Since 1938 thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

Little Mie-Wen and children like her need your love—won't you help? Today?

Sponsors are urgently needed this month for children in Korea, Formosa, India, Brazil, Japan and Hong Kong. (Or let us select a child for you from our emergency list.)

"Be careful, darling," warned Wanda, spill the Alka Bromo on the carpet."

But she wasn't really worried. Polycrest olefin the most stain-resistant kind of carpet fiber devised by man. Once Little Igor dropped a e flask of lysergicdimethamine on the living floor. It wiped right up with a damp sponge.

"Amazing what science can do," Franz observed. "My experiments prove Polycrest to be stain-resistant, shock-resistant, fuzzproof, allergy-proof, mildewproof, and mothproof. Yet it doesn't look at all synthetic."

"It's so natural, it's supernatural," Little Igor added with glee.

Yes, it was true. Even decorators had trouble telling Polycrest from wool. Transylvanian Consumer Reports said it looked like carpets twice the price. Such rich patterns. Such warm colors. Such deep, lush, lofty pile. Frankenklein loved to stomp through it barefoot with his size 42 feet.

"Does it look like a man-made fiber?" Wanda asked Frankenklein, who was also man-made.

"Yaaargh!" said Frankenklein and hid under the table.

"He's scared of the thunder," Little Igor explained.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

For years, one of my closest friends and I have exchanged pre-Christmas presents. We make a point of giving them to each other early because they are always the same thing—Christmas decorations. I found most engaging ones to give Sue this year: highly polychromed baked bread ornaments from Ecuador. They are made, literally, of bread that has been molded and baked hard, then painted and shellacked. Naïve yet sophisticated, they have the appeal of a good primitive painting. Most of them are dolls in costume, or animals, but I particularly loved the Christ Child in a manger. Georg Jensen sells them.

Every Christmas I like to make batches of my extra-special port, sherry, and sauterne jellies to give as presents. This year, I put them up in wineglasses instead of the conventional jars. I am giving half-a-dozen of mixed vintages to each of my close friends who loves wine jelly as an accompaniment to game or meat.

This year Twelfth Night falls on a Friday so we are going all out with a Three Kings fête like the ones we used to have in the years when we lived in Latin America where Reyes Magos is the big day for young and old alike.

In honor of the Magi, the theme of the party will be regal—at least in decoration and costume. We have asked everyone to come dressed in Persian splendor suitable to the courts of the East and bearing gifts of toys which will later be taken to our local crippled children's hospital. Purple, red, sapphire blue, and gold will be the color scheme. Although Don won't let me move all of the furniture out of the living room and substitute hassocks, as I had hoped to, we will clear enough space for dancing. And in place of all the pictures, I'm putting wall hangings composed of gold, red, and blue ornaments.

From a display company I plan to buy a wide swath of purple cloth to cover the buffet table. With lavish use of gold spray paint I can transform some of those great big pretzel goblets, a couple of inexpensive trays, and some ewers and beakers I found in the thrift shop into a Midas-touch centerpiece, letting them spill forth—like horns of plenty—dime-store diamonds and pearls, never-never jewels mixed with bunches of grapes, and any other glamour I can dream up. A glittering crystal punch bowl of sparkling Burgundy, continually replenished, should quench the thirst of the kings and their ladies.

Don found a perfect gift to give his partner this year—a collection of really superb bar glassware, especially suitable for a game and animal lover. Of crystal, skillfully hand-engraved in Germany, the glasses are designed in two sets. The Kenya series features giraffes, lions, and rhinos—one animal to a glass, shown in its natural setting. The American series pictures quail, duck, deer, rabbit, pheasant, and eagle, also in their proper backgrounds. The glasses range in size from super highballs, highballs, and double Old-fashioneds down to single Old-fashioneds. Sportsman's Gallery, where Don found them, also carries matching mugs, decanters, and pitchers, any of which would make a fine present for a sportsman.

When a party you are planning is too big for telephone invitations and too informal for engraved cards, it seems to me that a lighthearted printed invitation is the answer. But it is often difficult to find something suitable and engaging that isn't too darned cute. A refreshing change from all those cunning cocktail roosters are the invitations made by Fanfare: small die-cut foldovers in the shape of Christmas trees, pansies, butterflies, all in wonderful bright colors. Their envelopes, too, are in bright colors—not likely to get mixed up in the throwaway mail! Festoon Prints also makes charming place cards—whimsical but not corny.

When we went to the Greenes' for cocktails one cold Sunday afternoon recently, I noticed a tray of piping hot hors d'oeuvres sitting on a neat little black steel and copper food warmer. This nifty contrivance burns wood alcohol with a controllable flame in a ring construction like the burner on a gas range. In fact, you could actually do some limited cooking it. Norma says she and Jim pl to take it to their ski lodge as auxiliary to the small stove the I thought to myself how handy o of these Stockli Swiss warme would be on our boat next sui mer, for heating precooked ca-- roles and the like. As you migl guess, they are imported fr Switzerland.

At this season of frothy nogs ar rich food, it was very refreshin indeed to attend a luncheon part as we did last week, at which lovely dry sherry, poured over ic in a punch bowl, was the only pr prandial drink.

In the course of making the hol day rounds I noticed two fine new to-me ways of keeping party food warm. One was an impressive ho tray by G.E. that had a pull-ou drawer for keeping bread and rolls hot. Another, somewhat smaller tray I saw had a warming surface on one side and a cheeseboard on the other. This one was made by Morgan Designs.

FOR THE FUTURE, A HOUSEHOLD COMPUTER. At the moment "Echo-4" (Electronic Computer for Home Operation) exists only in the basement of its inventor, James Sutherland, a computer systems engineer with Westinghouse, who works on it in his spare time. As he sees it, his creation has potential as an indispensable household helper that will compute shopping lists, balance family finances, take messages, predict the weather, and control thermostats, among other chores. It may be ten years before the Echo-4 is ready, but it is something to think about.

You'd think we'd be used to it by now. But we're still a little surprised whenever someone says, "You can't get better sterling than Towle." Or, "Before I look at any other silver, I want to see Towle."

It's not our reputation that amazes us. It's how many people know about it. People who don't own silver. Never shopped for it before. Never even read one of our advertisements, as you're doing now.

Perhaps it's just that you can't be in business for two hundred seventy-six years without your name getting around. Perhaps it's that girls who get Towle do a lot of bragging about it. Perhaps it's that all those painstaking steps we take to make our silver more beautiful (simply because that's the Towle way to do things) don't go unnoticed.

In any case, Towle seems to mean something special to most people who give any thought to silver at all. In fact, of the twenty-five most chosen patterns in America, seven are by Towle. Almost one out of every three.

Which not only proves to us that there is such a thing as The Towle Reputation. It proves that we're living up to it.

GIVING THE GIFT OF MUSIC

BY FAUBION BOWERS

Like the links of a chain are the associations: Christmas-family-music-family music-Christmas. In these days of far-flung families, Christmas is the year's longest and most specific period for reunion, and if the house is filled with music, the occasion is that much more memorable. Christmas spirit and family feeling merge like the glow of a hearth fire, while music describes its warmth.

A hundred years ago every family made its own music. Today we have shifted, in the main, from active participation to passive response. Christmas, however, is one time when everybody somewhat atavistically feels constrained to gather around the piano and sing at least one verse of "Joy to the World." Christmas also is the great reminder—for those who heed—that music, for all the changes in the world about us, can still be incorporated into our daily living.

I know one clarion example. For more than a decade now I have spent as many Christmases as feasible with my son's godmother. At her house, Christmas is always a grand New England-type festival with crowds of children, grandchildren, even great grandchildren. The holly and the tree itself come from the grounds. Although the house and its estate are far too vast to be practical nowadays, they are maintained, I believe, largely as a setting for this annual celebration. Clearly, such a Christmas is important to all the family, down even to the somewhat removed god-relatives. The very invitation is lavish: "Come for Christmas" means, literally, come Christmas Eve and stay until the day after Christmas.

One of the most striking aspects of these celebrations—and one that has provided continuity over the years—is the importance of music. The family is not a family of musicians; rather it consists of businessmen, bankers, doctors, their wives and children. The matriarch does play the musical saw—at non-holiday times—and a stepfather performs passably on the autoharp—occasionally. Yet, the presence of music is all-pervasive at Christmas, and you feel this the second you enter the door.

The record player is given over to Christmas music. But in between the usual potpourris demanded by any houseful of people with divergent tastes—Odetta carols, Sutherland hymns, Christmas with Peggy Lee or Belafonte—there is always some special Christmas music. One year I remember hearing Elisabeth Schwarzkopf singing "Silent Night, Holy Night" in the original version, as scored by the composer, Franz Gruber, for guitar and boys' choir, because his church organ had broken down. Another year I met for the first time a classical rarity: Robert Schumann's "Christmas Eve Song," arranged for string orchestra. Still another unforgettable moment I owe to that house was "Drums for God," a record of Christian religious music recorded in various African countries. One member of the family, the head of an oil company, had just returned from a tour of Africa with a newly awakened taste for the vitality of primitive drumming, particularly as expressed in the passion of unquestioning faith. Odd as it may seem to us, it is more than probable that Jesus himself, 2,000 years ago, would have been more familiar with this rhythmic percussion than he would, say, with the geographically remote and emotionally formal cadences of music such as The Messiah.

Perhaps the most moving background music I have heard in that house belonged to last Christmas. One of the granddaughters, fresh from college music appreciation class, played over and over again the recording of the supernal "Heiliger Dankgesang" (Prayer of Thanksgiving) from Beethoven's A minor Quartet, Opus 132. She was particularly excited with it, because she was writing a term paper on the association, if not connection, between Beethoven's most exalted melody, written to celebrate his recovery from a severe illness, and the rapturous Psalm No. 116, Thanksgiving for Deliverance from Death—the psalm Jesus himself elected to sing at the Last Supper.

Christmas morning, however, after the presents are opened and scattered about the drawing room, is when I am invariably astonished at the amount of music there is in the world to give. I have observed the face of a child receiving his first harmonica with a book of instructions, or, if he were too young to read, a long-playing record. Christmases later I have seen the same look of delight when the same child (having persevered) opened a package and found the latest, most expensive harmonica "... just like Larry Adler's!"

Naturally I have watched youngsters with their toy drums and, most popular of all, ocarinas, those sweet-sounding, hand-cupped sweet potatoes you can play without thinking. Sometimes the sound is too much, too sustained for adult nerves, and once there were tears when an ocarina was used in the garden for a skeet shoot.

Last year, I learned one of the boys had been pestering his doubting parents for drums. His present was an envelope with a card, like a commuter's pass, entitling the bearer to a course of twenty lessons. This year, it remains to be seen whether there will be more lessons or the first actual drum towards a complete set.

One of the rewards of watching the present-opening over a period of years has been the opportunity to observe the tendrils of permanence that music sends out. What a pleasure it is to see a child grow and simultaneously move from a toy violin to a small-size wooden one, then on to a violin of moderately good make. It seems only a short while ago that another child, a fourteen-year-old boy, was tinkering with throwaway ukuleles. Now he is a member of a band —his school's rock-'n-roll group— playing an electric contraption with gourd resonators and a long slender neck of frets. His parents capitulated last Christmas and made up the balance between what he had saved up and the price of this instrument.

Some of the presents are standard. On the first Christmas after one of the older children has gone away to school or college, his gift is usually a new model portable stereo set. But some presents are special and unique. This year one of the older girls, who graduated from college last June, has moved into the city, on her own for the first time in her first job and her first apartment. Undoubtedly she needs all the furniture she can get, and since music can be furniture, too, her parents have found for her an old melodion bought for a song at a country antique shop. It is of dark mahogany, the keyboard section perched tidily on a pedestal base. The gift is intended not merely to help her "keep up her music," but to give the rather austere room a bit of mellowness and warmth.

Few of the older members of the family have pursued music except for the pleasure of listening. But for the family as a whole, music, obviously, is absorbed as easily as the air. By associating it with the happiest of seasons, the most convivial and gregarious time of year when a joyous atmosphere prevails, they make music truly a gift rather than a superimposition, as it so often is in more zealous households.

Courses in esthetics always teach the student varying levels of appreciation. "Take an apple," my old professor would say, quoting his old professor, "you can look at its bright reds and greens. You can touch it, feel its texture, run your hands over its smooth, slippery surface. You can use it for a decorative centerpiece on your table, or you can bob for it to m your party more lively. Fina you can eat it." Then he would each of us to stand up and expl which of the five attitudes would take and why.

The correct answer for budding estheticians was the f attitude. "Look at it," the pro sor would say ominously, point to the hypothetical apple. "To it with your eyes. Enjoy it with destroying it or putting it to u That is the highest goal."

it of all, peek de and see washes the s. Some dish- ers use sever- ay gimmicks. spraying isn't ning. Water to have just ight velocity, me and mo- to get dishes ly clean. (A henAid dish- her uses a ly wash arm, water action ffective dish- me out com- ly clean, without any hand-rinsing.) nen check how it dries. Most dish- ners have a simple heating coil that dries dishes the same as if you stuck them in a hot oven. All this concentrated heat could harm fine china and plastic- e. (A KitchenAid dishwasher has a arate heater and fan located outside wash chamber that circulates hot air r, under and around each dish. It's very thorough and safe.)

Be sure to consider how long the dishwasher will last, too. This is hard to tell, but here are a few points to consider. Is the dishwasher made of durable materials? (For example, KitchenAid dishwashers have porcelain enamel on the inside and outside of the wash chamber.) Is the motor dependable? (Few manufacturers bother to design their own motors. KitchenAid does. And tests them electronically before assembly.) Is the dishwasher inspected after it's assembled? (Every part is thoroughly checked and every single KitchenAid dishwasher is hooked up for a test run before it leaves the factory.) Is the dishwasher made by specialists? (At KitchenAid it is. KitchenAid is built by the people who have made commercial dishwashers for restaurants, hotels, hospitals, etc., for over 80 years; home dishwashers for nearly 20 years. And many of these original home dishwashers are still going strong.)

Another point. Find out how much the dishwasher holds. You'll probably get an answer in place settings. But look for yourself, too. If you see empty corners or notches cut out of racks, the dishwasher has a lot of wasted space.

But capacity isn't everything. A good dishwasher should be convenient to use, too. See if you can adjust the racks to hold big things like roasters and deep bowls. And you should be able to pull the racks all the way out so you can reach in the back easily. On a portable dishwasher, can you reach the lower rack without unloading or removing the top rack? And watch out if you have to load dishes in a certain way. This gets to be a pain in the neck.

One more thing. You shouldn't have to fuss with dials or knobs with a good dishwasher. So make sure the dishwasher works completely automatically, at the touch of a button.

And if you want your dishes and glasses to dry without any spots get a dishwasher with an Automatic Rinse Agent Dispenser. You'll find this is very important if you live in a hard water area.

Now, if you want to save some time before you start looking, here are two more things you can do. (1) Ask some KitchenAid dishwasher owners how they like their dishwashers. (2) Send this coupon to KitchenAid Dishwashers, Dept. 6DA-12, The Hobart Manufacturing Co., Troy, Ohio 45373. You'll get full details on portables, built-ins, convertible-portables and dishwasher-sink combinations.

The people who built your dishwasher * recommend that you use something besides a detergent to prevent water spots.

They recommend:

LIQUID JET-DRY.

for dishwashers with automatic dispensers for JET-DRY

LIQUID JET-DRY causes glasses, silverware and china to shed water instantly after they are rinsed. No water drops are left on the dishes to dry into unsightly water spots. Dishwasher manufacturers, recognizing JET-DRY as the answer to water spotting, equip many models to inject LIQUID JET-DRY into the rinse water. If your dishwasher is so equipped, don't run out of JET-DRY. Even one dishwashing without JET-DRY can cause spots.

SOLID JET-DRY.

for dishwashers without dispensers for JET-DRY

SOLID JET DRY is now available for dishwashers not equipped to dispense LIQUID JET-DRY. It dries dishes just as spot-free and sparkling (and just as automatically) as LIQUID JET-DRY does in dishwashers equipped with automatic dispensers. SOLID JET-DRY comes in the form of a bar which is neatly encased in a plastic basket. You simply clip the basket to any corner of the upper rack of your dishwasher. Remember to buy JET-DRY. At grocery stores and dishwasher dealers.

* JET-DRY is recommended by the manufacturers of all 28 makes of dishwashers.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUR CHRISTMAS TREE

Here is a simple household formula for keeping your tree upstanding and fresh throughout the holiday season

INGREDIENTS

¼ cup horticultural iron

1 gallon hot water

2 cups light corn syrup

4 teaspoons chlorinated household bleach

You can double the indoor life of most evergreens simply by standing them in this easily prepared formula. At your florist, garden supply, or hardware store, ask for Green Garde, a micronized horticultural iron. The other two ingredients, a corn syrup such as Karo, and a bleach such as Clorox, are pantry shelf items from your grocery store. In a bowl, you mix the micronized iron with the hot water, and stir in the corn syrup and household bleach. The Green Garde will not dissolve completely; it will produce a blue-green mixture with particles that will settle to the bottom. With a saw, remove about an inch from the tree trunk to level the base and to remove any solidified resinous material. Then crush the fibers at the cut end with hammer blows, stand the tree in a tree holder, and pour in the solution. Keep the holder filled throughout the holidays with warm tap water. A tree standing in plain water alone will droop like the specimen below left after ten days, but if you use this preserving formula, your tree should remain for twice that time as green and open-armed and vigorous as the example, below right.

With water alone

The newest, most challenging numbers game. NUMBLE will sharpen the wits and provide hours of exciting fun for the whole family. It's like Scrabble, and a little like crosswords—but it's all done with numbers. Up to four players can match wits to try to get the highest score. The rules are simple: The first player places from two to six numbered tiles on the board in ascending or descending order. The catch is that the total of all the tiles must be divisible by three. Then, each player in turn builds numbers on numbers, trying to take advantage of the bonus squares that can send your score soaring. NUMBLE is boxed, comes complete with attractive playing board, 87 tiles and four tile racks.

INFORMATION, INCORPORATED,
119 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y. 10003

MEDICALLY PROVEN ON 10,000 PATIENTS. IT WILL GIVE YOU A NEW FIGURE AND A NEW LIFE — IF YOU FOLLOW IT SO RELIGIOUSLY THAT YOU EVEN EAT WHEN IT SAYS TO EAT EVEN IF YOU DON'T FEEL HUNGRY!

Here are a few examples of the "pleasant surprises" you will find throughout this book:

Although, of course, this diet forces you to eat less food overall, it may actually force you to eat MORE food at certain times of the day. For example, if you are like most over-weight people, you are simply going to have to eat MORE for breakfast, whether you want it or not. And this diet allows you OVER THIRTY different kinds of snacks—one between every meal, and one every night before you go to bed.

There is no longer any need to try to STARVE yourself into a weight loss. Because, when you follow this Final Diet, you will quite normally lose up to 100 pounds a year—and never gain a single ounce of it back.

Certain foods, of course, are omitted. But certain other, surprising foods are quite actively included. For example, you are allowed ice cream up to three times a week. (Watch your friends eyes pop open with astonishment when they see you eating that delicious ice cream dessert—and STILL shedding inches and pounds!)

And, at the same time, you'll have sandwiches for lunch, and, if you wish, a cocktail before dinner and wine with it. In other words, there's no punishment in this diet—only scientific eating.

And—very important—if you make a mistake one day (as this doctor KNOWS you're going to make mistakes), and overeat, then he simply does NOT permit you to cut back on your food the next day to "make up" for it! This is the fatal mistake most dieters make that destroys their diet. Instead, he forces you to eat YOUR FULL DIET the next day, and forgive yourself, and go on losing weight.

IS YOUR WEIGHT UNEVENLY DISTRIBUTED? ARE YOU AFRAID THAT DIETING WILL MAKE YOUR FACE LOOK OLDER? DO YOU HABITUALLY OVER-EAT AT PARTIES? THEN HERE AT LAST ARE MEDICAL SOLUTIONS TO EACH OF THESE PROBLEMS.

And—to repeat again—when you follow this Final Diet, you will lose up to 100 pounds a year, and never gain an ounce.

Now let us examine some of the quite remarkable side effects of this diet—documented bonus-benefits that no crash-diet on earth, for example, could ever get you.

In the first place, because of the scientific nature of this diet, it has proven—in case after case—to be of special help to men and women whose excess fat is primarily on or below the waist. It has enabled such men and women—some of whom had been plagued all their adult lives with ugly fat deposits on their hips, thighs and legs—to trim off these ugly bulges WITHOUT losing too much from their bust or face at the same time!

Secondly, because this diet is NOT a crash diet, NOT a torture diet, it does NOT cause the skin of your face to collapse, wrinkle and furrow in that terrible way that crash diets so often do.

On the contrary, if you follow this Final Diet precisely, your face will look younger, and younger, and younger—from almost the very first week. And you will lose up to 100 pounds per year. And never gain an ounce of it back.

And you will be able to lose this weight, and keep it off, despite the parties you attend—despite the business or club lunches and dinners—despite all the "social eating and drinking" everyone of us must do, every week of our lives!

Because this is the first diet you have ever seen that gives you specific techniques for dealing with each one of these "food traps". That allows you to satisfy yourself AND your diet AND your companions—without calling the slightest attention to the fact that you are dieting, and by actually allowing you to SEEM to eat, and drink as much as they are, when you are really LOSING POUNDS AND INCHES at the very same moment that they are gaining them!

Yes, even if you attend another business lunch, every day of the week, when you follow this Final Diet, you will lose up to 100 pounds per year, and never gain an ounce of it back.

In fact—

MANY PATIENTS FOUND THIS DIET SO EFFECTIVE THAT THEY LOST TWICE AS MUCH WEIGHT AS THEY HAD ORIGINALLY HOPED TO! HERE'S HOW THEY KEPT THAT WEIGHT OFF. AND WHY YOU WILL TOO.

The proof of this diet, of course, is in the results it produces for YOU. That is why we allow you to read it from cover to cover AT OUR RISK, and why you can try it for thirty full days thereafter without gambling a penny.

Let us make this perfectly clear: The first thing you do when you receive this book, is write down the exact amount of weight you want to lose, right inside it. This may by 10 pounds—20 pounds—40 pounds—or more. It makes no difference.

Then, that same day, you begin the diet. But with THIS thought:

Every one of the 10,000 successful patients who have traveled this road before you, have written down the figure that they wanted to lose. But once they got started—once they learned these new eating habits—many of them simply went FAR BEYOND the weight-loss figure they had first thought would be "perfection" for them!

For example, one woman patient wanted to lose 10 pounds, and be as thin as she was five years before. But as the diet developed, and the fat melted away from her body, she decided to GO ON and lose 20 pounds, and be as slim as she was on the first day she was married!

Why did these patients decide to lose more, and more, and even more weight? FOR THE VERY SAME REASON THAT THEY DID NOT PUT THIS WEIGHT BACK ON AGAIN! Because by following this diet precisely, these men and women LEARNED NEW EATING HABITS. They literally retrained their appetites! They destroyed the fat-causing food patterns that had kept them over-weight for years!

About The Author:

In addition to his private practice, he is chief of the Obesity Clinic at Knickerbocker Hospital, of the Morrisania Nutrition Clinic, New York City Department of Health, of the Kips Bay Obesity Clinic, New York City Department of Health.

This was by no means easy—but they did it, and you can do it too! And once you have done it, it will be practically impossible for you to eat in the same old fat-causing way that you are eating today!

Once you follow this Final Diet precisely ... once you put yourself on the road to making these scientific new eating habits your guides to health and beauty... then you must lose up to 100 pounds per year, and never gain an ounce.

PROVE IT YOURSELF— ENTIRELY AT OUR RISK.

The choice is now yours. You have been on fad diets—easy diets—miracle diets. You have lost some weight. You have gained it right back again!

NOW DO YOU WANT TO LOSE IT FOR GOOD?

There is no wardrobe in the world you can buy that will make you look as attractive. There is no pill in the world that will give you as much renewed energy and vitality, or add more healthy years to your life.

The choice is yours. This is a book for people who mean business. If you really mean business, cut out the coupon and send it in—at our risk today!

Amazing new Sonic Books keep children entertained for hours, make reading fun

BOOKS THAT TALK!

NOW A CHILD CAN READ AND HEAR WHAT HE'S READING AT THE SAME TIME ALL FROM ONE ASTONISHING NEW BOOK—THE SONIC READER

As child reads here... He turns Sonic Wheel and listens here

How These Books Talk

opened Sonic Reader is The Night Before tmas, and all 9 books are like it. It combines page illustrated book with a recorded narra- of the story, complete with sound effects, in compact self-contained unit. It measures a arge 8½x11 inches, is almost 2 inches thick, on the right side has a white molded sound ducer and amplifier which contains the d. It is played by merely turning the Sonic l with the fingertip. No batteries or electricity eeded. The record automatically resets itself plays over and over again. The Sonic Reader durably made that a child can even drop or it without fear of damaging it, and it is even g enough to support the full weight of an ! In every way, it has been engineered to give g pleasure.

r Your Child—Hours of Reading Fun

Christmas give your children, grandchildren, any child up to 12 years old, any of these 9 fine "Books That Talk," and then watch as he picks it up, looks at the colorful eye-catching pictures, turns the Sonic wheel and hears noise. If he's like the children we've tested, you'll see a big smile—and what's just as important, the smile and the interest stay through the entire book. If your child is very young, we recommend Bozo And His ABC Zoo (a wonderful way to learn the alphabet and associate the correct sound with the correct letter) or What Time Is It (teaches time and numbers). If he or she is a little older, then perhaps Mother Goose (with old King Cole, Little Bo-Peep, Humpty-Dumpty and the rest), Tommy And His Drum (a swell story for boys) or Little Red Riding Hood (the voices here are just wonderful). And certainly for all children of all ages, Santa's Missing Reindeer and the great classic so beautifully told here, The Night Before Christmas. No matter which you select, you'll be giving some child hours of entertainment, hours of learning, because you'll have made reading fun!

Masterful voices recreate this story

Once upon a time there was a father whose child was bedridden. To help him pass the lonely hours, he made a recording of one of his son's story books and put it on an old turntable that his son could turn as he read the story. It worked. His son had something to entertain him, and before his son was well, his father made over 30 recordings for him. Sound like a fairy tale? It isn't. It is the true story of a remarkable man and how he developed the world's only Sonic Reader—Books That Talk.

An Entertainment and Educational Breakthrough

That was in 1959, and it has taken 6 long years of testing, and testing again to develop these astonishing books. Here is a story book that has not only large easy-to-read letters, and striking full-color illustrations on every page, but a complete built-in recording of every word, every sound, every feeling in the book—recorded and ready to play back over and over again, loud and clear at the speed your child wants simply by placing his finger on the Sonic Reader wheel (the record is completely covered and he never touches it), and turning it. There is no electricity, no batteries. It's so simple, the record even tells the child what page to turn to!

Hailed By Educators

Educators tell us that a child's attention span can be as short as 15 seconds, that one of the major problems in teaching a youngster to read (and also after he has learned to read), is keeping his interest. They also tell us that action is what gets that attention, gets that all important interest. Simply enough, this is exactly what these Sonic Readers provide—the action to keep the child's interest and attention as he reads, and learns while he reads. SONIC READERS MAKE READING FUN.

Every Child Can Read These Books At Our Risk!

We feel that these new Sonic Readers are so rewarding, have such phenomenal play value, will provide a short cut to better, quicker reading for any child, that we gladly make this offer. Buy any of these books. If at the end of 10 days you are not completely satisfied that these astonishing Sonic Readers are everything that we have said—and more—return them for a prompt refund. Surely, it is well worth trying

VIRGINIA HAM AGED LIKE VINTAGE WINE

Christmas Tradition for 300 Years!

Smoked for weeks over hand tended fires, kept going day and night, while juices drip and pungent hickory smoke permeates and flavors the meat. Aged a year, then baked with wine and sugar. Arrives ready to serve (doesn't even need heating), for Christmas feast, buffet, cocktails, sandwiches, etc. Traditionally sliced paper thin and served cold; goes a long way; easy to keep; a delight to any homemaker during busy holidays.

300 years ago Virginia planters traded their hams to English sailing masters. Soon the old world's epicures were agog over this new flavor. Virginia Ham became famous around the world. It still is. Each magnificent ham now hanging in our aging rooms has been slowly cured, smoked to a rich mahogany hue, and aged the way the colonists did it 300 years ago. For there is no short cut to such flavor. Just before shipment each ham is soaked, simmered, skinned, the fat trimmed, then sauced with wine and sugar, and baked to a sweet and savory feast of flavor unlike any other!

Nested in burgundy tissue in sturdy Old Virginia Smokehouse box, with carving, keeping, serving suggestions enclosed, here is a grand treat for your family and guests and a magnificent gift! Our hams are prepared to please discerning people. We guarantee complete satisfaction or money refunded. $1.98 per lb., net cooked weight, plus postage (estimated at $1.50 per ham East of the Mississippi and $3.00 West of the Mississippi). Sizes: 8 to 15 lbs. Please specify if wanted now, for Christmas, or other date.

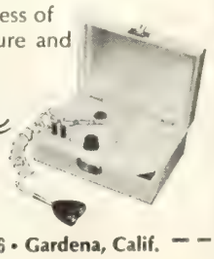
the nicest thing about Zeigler Facial Care: IT REALLY WORKS!

This woman used to appear as you see her on the left, showing signs of normal aging. The photo on the right shows the dramatic improvement Zeigler Facial Care made in six fleeting months.



These photos are not retouched, and she did not lose weight. How was it done? By scientifically correct exercise of the facial muscles and stimulation of the deeper facial circulation. That's the Zeigler way—it does more than creams, vibration or massage. It is pleasant and effective to use; years of medical research and testing prove it so.

Will Zeigler Facial Care do this for your beauty?

Will it improve facial contours? ■ Reduce the prominence of fine lines and wrinkles? ■ Generally improve facial appearance with more youthful contours?

Improve tightness of skin, skin texture and complexion?

32 individually hand-carved Ming Dynasty pieces

SOLID IVORY CHESS SET

with fine inlaid teak chest & playing board

The art of carving ivory is exacting, and for good reason. Elephant tusks are obviously limited in supply, and expensive. The more intricate the work, the more skilled the craftsmen. That is the case here, you have 32 intricate, individually hand-carved pieces. Each is a little jewel—the Kings (stand a full 3") and Queens are Ming Dynasty and appropriately clothed. The Bishops are Chinese scholars, the Knights are 17th century warriors, and the Castles are war elephants. The 8 pawns, each different, are the 8 Chinese immortals, legendary beings that represent these conditions in life—Wealth, Poverty, Aristocracy, Plebianism, Age, Youth, Masculinity and Femininity. A superior set, pure ivory, in lined teak playing-board chest (14 x 7 x 3"). In time, as the ivory takes on the glow of age, it will become an heirloom. $30 ppd.

When your host asks what you'd like, is it polite to specify the Smooth Canadian?

(Or should you just hope for the best?)

Etiquette says hope. So next time you're host, be sure to offer Seagram's V.O. After all, more people prefer it than any other brand of imported whisky (including Scotch). That's because V.O. does what no other whisky can—defines smooth once and for all. Light? Of course. Next question, Emily?

How long is Christmas?

SUSAN GREENBERG WOOD

Twenty-four hours, says the calendar. Twelve days says tradition. But even the Twelve days of Christmas are not enough to embrace all the love and joy, the gaiety and the nostalgia, the reverence and the good will that make Christmas what it is. The real celebration begins well before December 25.

Giving, for instance, involves not merely the brief act of presentation, but the long, thoughtful pondering on what to give, the shopping, the wrapping, the delivering or even the waiting in line at the post office. Expressing good will includes the little notes and the long letters, the personal greetings handwritten on Christmas cards, the envelope addressing and fixing the stamps. Hospitality means not only the welcome at the door, but all the baking and roasting and brewing that precedes it, the tying and tacking and ladder-climbing that fills the house with enchantment, the little unexpected touches that embellish the dinner table. What we call "getting ready" for Christmas is an inseparable part of the celebration itself. And every minute of it ought to be fun.

But if you are so carried away by shining intentions that you undertake to do more than any one human in four weeks could possibly do, or if you go about it all in the dutiful spirit of redeeming an obligation, fun it will not be. You will end up on Christmas Eve exhausted, harried, nagged by remorse over what has been left undone. Joy will be missing.

The joys of Christmas are personal joys, different for everyone. To some the most festive hours are the ones they spend entangled, like the moppets above, in glistening ribbons and billowing paper, making a thing of glory out of each modest gift. To others, the greatest delight is the joyful noise of a house full of guests. And for many, the season's highlights are the musical services at church. Must you forgo whatever makes Christmas truly Christmas for you, because you are too busy with all the other things you feel you have to do?

There are no musts about Christmas. Far more in keeping with the spirit and intent of the feast, it seems to us, is to limit the pre-Christmas celebration to what you can do lovingly, happily, without stress or strain. For then, and only then, will you communicate joy to others.

May your Christmas this year be a long one, and may every day of it be merry.

A PERSONAL MASTERPIECE

Christmas decorations are like champagne: in the loveliest way possible, they go to one's head. But of all the celebrants we know, few are so susceptible to the intoxication of scarlet, green, and gold as a young New York lawyer named Hamlin Becker and his mother—a joyful pair who permit themselves one month a year of sheer Dickensian glee. Since the day Mr. Becker throttled his first Lionel train through a toy Bavarian village, he and his mother have made of the twelve days of Christmas a rite of spectacular splendor. The train and village—too battered now for anything except veneration—have long since been supplanted by a marvelous collection of Christmas trappings that are brought down from shelves and up from the basement the day after Thanksgiving. The arsenal of cartons, indexed and catalogued like top secrets, is unpacked, and the Beckers begin the month-long hanging and nailing that transforms their living room into an illustration for a baroque fairy tale.

There is always a towering tree—a fresh-cut monolith that every year, like the fireplace, is decked with the same ornaments. But because each Christmas is built around a different theme, the rest of the room is never the same. On each table, ledge, and possible perch there is a tiny tableau inspired by the motif of the year. In 1965, it was "Christmas Is Music To My Ears"—an umbrella for song titles that ran a lively scale from "Jingle Bells" to "76 Trombones." On Christmas Eve, every child the Beckers knew was invited to a party and provided, at the door, with a list of the titles, then given a tour of the tableaux. To a child who knew both his carols and his show tunes, the guessing game was a lark. Among a flock of iridescent butterflies floating on golden threads, the clue was a plaintive flutterer with only one wing. A grand parade of wooden soldiers on the shelf on an open armoire did homage to Tchaikovsky: eagle eyes found each soldier to be a nutcracker. And a bevy of trumpeting angels, suspended over a globe revolving on an electric turntable, symbolized joy to a very special world.

Here and there among the tableaux there are always other wonders simply to look at—gems like a little tree hung with nothing but pretty baubles made of red velvet by Mrs. Becker's needle. The Three Wise Men appear in twenty different groupings composed of beautiful figures from France, Mexico, and heaven knows where. And on every painting in the room there is a superimposed, three-dimensional collage of a Yule scene —latter-day Adorations which Mr. Becker makes of old Christmas cards.

Fireplace and tree follow family tradition

Always, the Beckers' tree is a titan—usually with a nip taken from its crown to clear the ceiling. To support the weight of so much splendor, each branch is wired stoutly to the trunk, then wound with lights and "about a mile" of silver-bead ropes. The ornaments, which go on last, are hung with reverence: some of them are decades old. Framed with a Della Robbia garland, the chimney breast is buttonholed with a wreath made of real fruit, marvelously preserved. Then the mantel is swagged with a fabulous festoon Mr. Becker made—and still adds to—of ornaments unearthed in millinery supply shops.

FLORAL FANTASIES IN FELT

H&G'S CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS FOR 196

Velvety as a kitten's ear, lush as a hanging garden, H&G's new and very own decorations for 1966 are a bit daring, enormously dashing, and wholeheartedly floral. Felt poppy fantasies, they are created in traditional forms—wreaths, garlands, topiary trees—but so glamorously that just a few of them will turn a room into a holiday hothouse. The colors are wonderful—vivid splashes of H&G's Tangerine and Tiger Lily with two shades of green, or, if you prefer, Lemon Peel and white with two shades of green, a fresh-as-daisies combination that makes the fantasies as good the year-round as for Christmas. Light as feathers and marvelously versatile, these ornaments are easy to handle and just about as indestructible as such things can be since they are sturdily constructed on Styrofoam bases. And wall pieces like the wreaths and garlands all have hanging loops that fit neatly over a pushpin—the best kind of "tack." There is almost no limit to the assemblies you can devise with a full battery of the basic forms: single flowers with short wire stems for trees, place cards, and napkin rings; long-stemmed flowers for bouquets; a wall bouquet, flat on one side so that a pair can be clamped together to make a hanging ball; wreaths in two sizes; topiary trees, ditto; a garland with companion jabots to form a swag; a single candleholder; a four-candle candelabrum; a basket planter for a centerpiece. With this luxuriant bevy, a field-of-poppies Christmas is yours—for years.

FANTASIES IN FELT

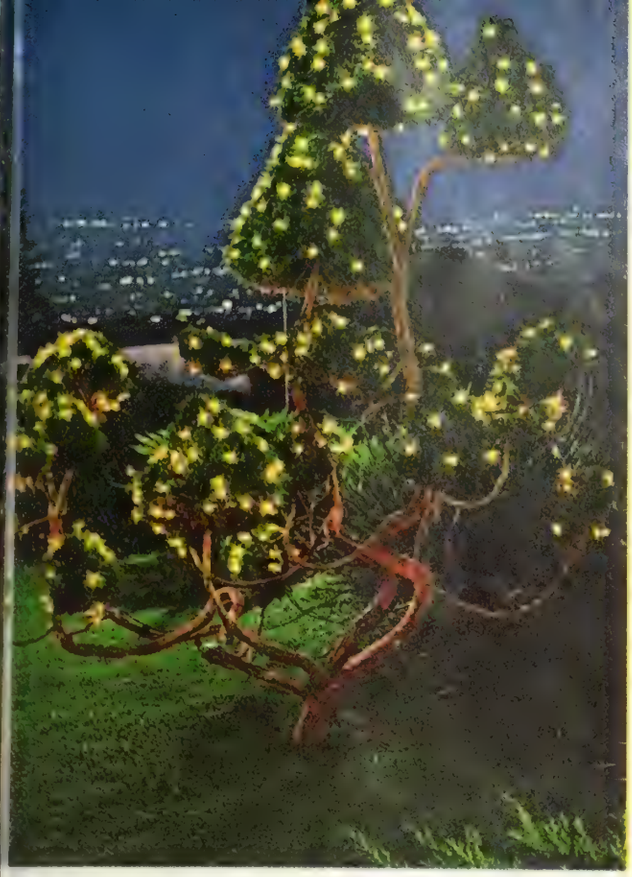
Amenable to any background, the felt fantasies seem even gayer in a bucolic setting—in this case, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Patmore's two-hundred-year-old country house in Stepney, Conn. In the hall, top left, two corner cupboards filled with Mrs. Patmore's collection of ironstone, lusterware, and Vieux Paris salute the season with topiary trees and a pair of swags made of garlands and jabots. Since the fantasies' Styrofoam bases are rigid, there is no need to fuss over draping—the curves are built-in. • On the living room mantel, top right, two wall bouquets and a 16-inch wreath form a vivid trio against the white. • The library's pine paneling, above left, gets a really heroic splash: a garland and a pair of jabots hung from whopping bows (four pushpins do the trick) plus a brace of 22-inch wreaths. Single flowers and greens compose a lifelike bouquet in the umbrella stand on the hearth. • Single flowers, their stems coiled like napkin rings, above center, make perky partners for a topiary centerpiece. • Welcoming as open arms, the front door, above right, is dressed in a garland with double jabots, a big wreath, and sentinel topiaries.



GUERRERO

For a city cliff dwelling, a garden Christmas

In a shift of character, the poppies—this time in yellow and white—bring a fresh and engaging naïveté to the extremely sophisticated, highly contemporary New York apartment of interior designer Harold Schwartz. In the foyer, above left, two carved doors, ornate and baronial, wear wreaths that hang with the innocent charm of May baskets. Topiary trees make a nice balance of color and mass. • In the living room, top right, a polyvinyl tree is decked with single flowers, silver Christmas balls (no color competition), and pine cones as nostalgic as cranberries and popcorn. The prefabricated metal fireplace radiates even more cheer because of the wreath overhead and the hearth-based table topiary—nonseasonal enough to stay out the winter. • Across the room, above right, hangs a bravura swag of three garlands, four bows, and two double jabots—a spring-in-December arabesque for a 22-inch wreath. (All garlands, wreaths, and jabots, incidentally, come with bows.) Since this is a brick wall, pushpins and nails, too difficult to drive, were exchanged for anchors of tough double-faced Scotch tape—proof of the fantasies' comparative weightlessness.

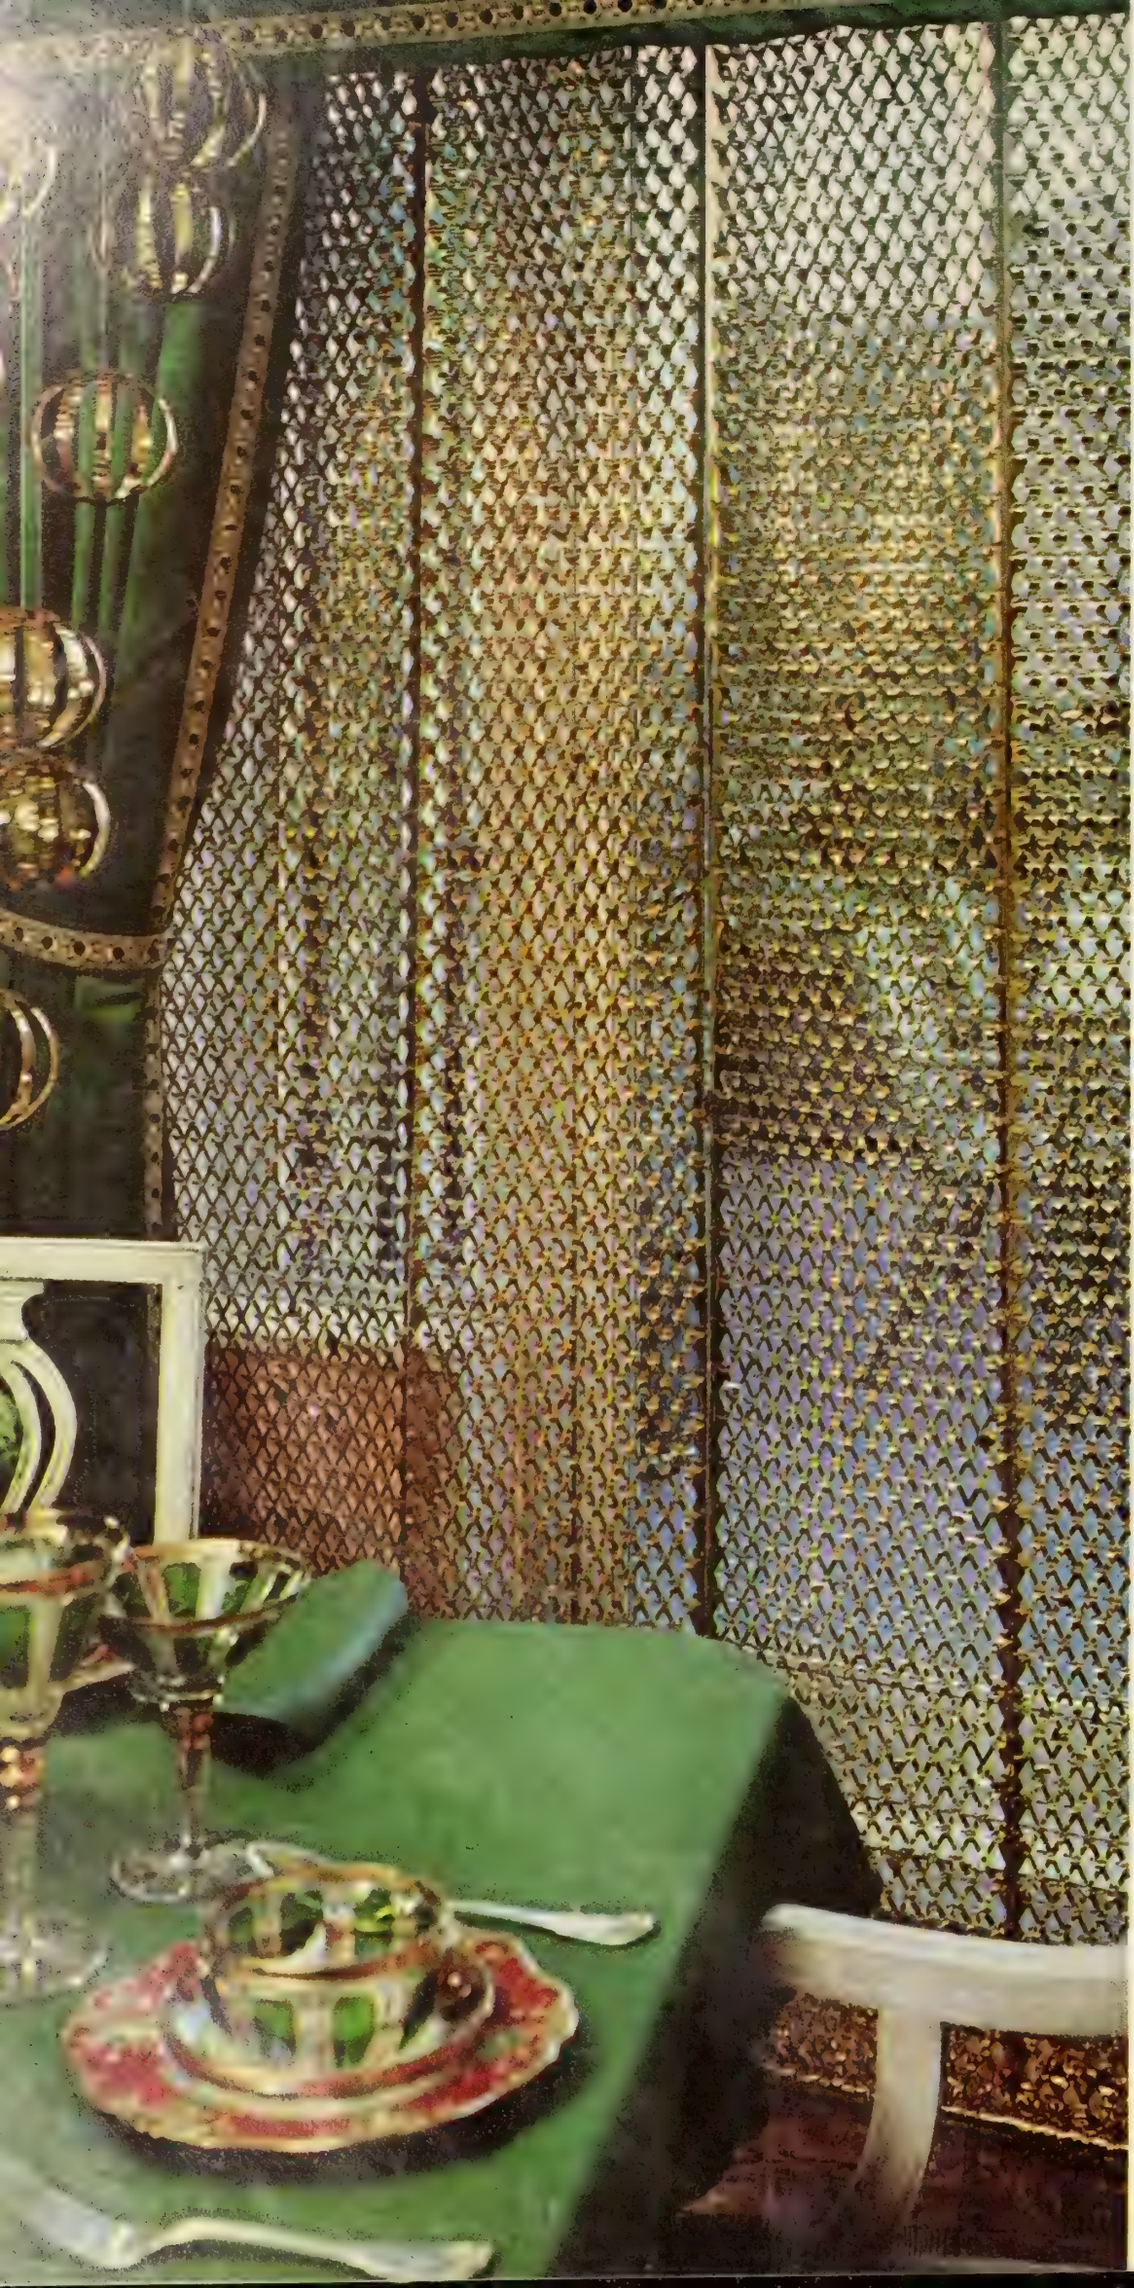
IMAGINATIVE GLITTER AND GLOW



Holiday decorations you can buy and adapt creatively

Here and on the following two pages is a seasonal gleaning of wonderful, storable, reusable ornaments and accessories that you can group or mass or hang in a variety of ways to give your house your own special kind of Christmas enchantment.

Opposite page: Giant crystalline snowflakes of flittered plastic and a string of lights encased in plastic stars shed their glitter on semi-precious minerals in a "rock candy mountain" centerpiece. Stars and flakes can also hang a-gleam on your tree.

Above: Some 600 tiny Italian lights turn a many-tufted cryptomeria shrub on the Beverly Hills, Calif., terrace of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skouras into a twinkling little forest of Yule trees.

Right: Glistening stalagmites of stiff foil and spiny bright stars transform the Gardner Cowles' entrance hall into a magical Christmas wonderland. You can also hang the foil trees by the loops at their tops, and for storage, each telescopes into its largest segment, the shredded ruffs slipping easily into the joints. Stars come apart for compact storage, too: each ray slips off its little knob on the plastic ball at the center.

CHRISTMAS ENCHANTMENT

THE MAGICA FLICKER OF CANDLE

Candlelight is an irresistible element of the glitter and gleam of Christmas, both for its own fascinating flicker and for its lively reflections in every shining object within its radius. A marvelous means of creating endless varied compositions of candlelight is the Kaleidokandle—a new series of candlestick components, above, that pop together on dowels like a Tinker Toy. They come in four basic shapes: a flat disc base for tall constructions (in red, at far left, above); a bulbous shape that can be used with either end up (separated pieces in yellow, white, and blue, above); a smaller wide-rimmed shape, also reversible (separated pieces in red and natural); and a 7-inch-tall base that can be combined with the other shapes (in natural between the two multicolored combinations). Dowel connectors and spike adaptors for use with extra-fat candles are also packed with each set of components.

On an entrance hall table, left, a quartet of candlesticks in two heights, interspersed with Christmas balls, create a welcoming glow, abetted by four more candleholders above on iron wall hangers.

On the family gift table, opposite page, a city of lights composed of component candleholders and a collection of antique mercury glass candlesticks magnetizes every eye. The glow is many times multiplied by mirrored table top, mirror mosaic place mats double-taped to wall. Mats from Scarabaeus.

FESTIVITY IN A FRESH KEY

THREE HOLIDAY PARTIES WITH OFFBEAT SURPRISES

At Christmas dinner and Christmas Eve supper, tradition rightly reigns unchallenged. But Christmas is a time for the untraditional, too. Since the urge and the occasions for entertaining start well before December 25th and do not stop until Twelfth Night, why confine your hospitality to the traditional open house? Surprise is the very essence of Christmas, and a party surprise might start with the size and makeup of the guest list. Small parties are usually more fun for everybody, especially during a season when so many are big. Invite, by eights or tens, friends who don't see each other very often and friends you haven't seen for an age. Invite neighbors, your children's teachers, parents of your children's best friends.

The raison d'être of your parties can be unexpected, too—a pre-Christmas session of package wrapping or ornament-making; a cockles-warming buffet before or after a community tree lighting or a Christmas play; a wee-hour breakfast to cap off a big do. When it comes to the food, steer away from the ham-turkey-fruit cake routine which at this season your guests may have good reason to consider daily fare. And although your house may be filled with traditional Christmas enchantment, set your table with an offbeat theme. Here are three holiday parties designed in one way or another to give your guests a surprise.

Breakfast after a ball

Twilight supper in the desert

Dinner for ornament makers

A delightfully unexpected way of entertaining a small group early in the holidays before their calendars get too crowded is a black-tie dinner followed by an ornament-making bee. The new instant papier-mâché (see page 164) is so unmessy, so easy to handle, and offers such scope for imagination and wit that an hilarious evening is guaranteed. Make your own ornaments a few days before to serve as decoration at the party—as jazz musician Mary Ann O'Malley did for the one at her Connecticut farmhouse, left and opposite page. Instead of a centerpiece on the table, she hung her creations from the chandelier and gave each guest a gay individual breadboard designed to be wiped off, taken home, and hung on the Christmas tree along with their own output of the evening. The mainstay of dinner was Boeuf Bourguignon from the big tureen. Plates, teak-handled stainless-steel knives, forks, spoons, and glass candleholders by Dansk.

Breakfast after the Christmas b

Twilight i

swimming in the South

Two o'clock in the morning might seem an unlikely hour for a party, but during Christmas week when there is a gala every night, an invitation to "come back to our house for breakfast" can be most apropos. For this breakfast party, the dining room was stripped of its customary furniture, then set up with rented tables and chairs (they came equipped with red cushions). Yards and yards of inexpensive cotton, some plain, some plaid, made the tablecloths and napkins. The decorations: H&G's felt poppy jabots (see page 142) pinned to the tablecloths; a lineup of topiary trees against the wall. On the buffet, a sturdy breakfast largely prepared ahead: braised kidneys, sausages, eggs scrambled with curry. China from Paul Straub; International silver; Lobmeyer crystal.

In a warm, sunny climate, decorations that blend with the natural be ties of the surroundings look far more festive than a snow-and-r deer theme. For an early supper (before a Christmas play, perhaps) blue of this pool and cabana prompted the choice of H&G's felt fantas in yellow, green, and white—large topiary trees to ring the pool, smaller size for the buffet and the cabana along with garlands, jab wreaths, and a bouquet. The tables are covered with felt to match green poppies and topped with mirror-mosaic mats. The menu inclu such traditional Mexican treats as: cold pumpkin soup, turkey m and in a punch bowl on a rock, Sangria, the Spanish wine punch. GAY CROP OF CHRISTMAS WRAPPINGS and merry ways to use them

This year's smashing array of new gift wrappings makes the old holly berry and poinsettia designs look as humdrum as brown paper. Bold stripes in colors that not only sing but jump for joy, lavish patterns of Renaissance splendor, floral designs as pretty as the prettiest gift—any of them would send even a ten-thumbed package wrapper into joyful orbit. Here is a sampling of the new papers plus ideas for using some of them for problem gifts—the hard-to-wrap shape that seems to defy confinement; the ultra-practical gift, invariably welcome but short on drama; the all-too-obvious object that rules out the surprise.

The real Christmas

As I become older, I find Christmas more and more bewildering. When I was a small child, I knew more or less what it was: a feast of affirmation and belief in what I then thought of as "niceness," polar opposite of "horridness." I thought of it, also, at that time, as a peculiarly intimate and private celebration, a day that was given up to the open expression of the tenderest of feelings, of love and affection for those nearest to one, feelings normally held in check for fear that one might be thought soft or sentimental.

I was an only child, and my first intimations of what the adult world was like came to me during the dark last years of World War I. My conceptions of Christmas were, perhaps, colored by these two circumstances. The earliest Christmas that I can remember at all was that of 1917, as sad a year for the English as it was for most Europeans. The war that had been going on since 1914 seemed to be endless and unendable. It had become a part of life, as ingrained dirt becomes a part of life for those who are forced to live without bathrooms, soap, and water for months or years. The women had a leaden sense that it would go on, and on, until every man in the country who could by any stretch of the imagination be thought of as young or able had been killed or maimed, and every private joy extinguished. People became poisoned with a kind of horror of life itself as they saw more and more names of boys and men they knew on the appalling casualty lists that came out after every big new battle, each one more futile than the last. Perhaps, they thought, civilization, or man, or history, had come to some turning point, and nothing would ever go easily and well again.

The burden of those days could be felt even by a child. I well remember their dingy tone, compounded of strain and anxiety: the drab clothes, the skimpy meals of rationed foods, and the greenish, exhausted faces of the men and women one passed in the streets, so full of men in ugly khaki, of the sharp electric blue of hospital uniforms, and of women in the black of full mourning. The blue-clad convalescents were to be seen in horrifying numbers in fine weather sunning themselves on the benches in Kensington Gardens and Hyde Park as they recovered from the shock of realizing the price they had paid for their "blighty" wounds. They were "out of it." They were no longer haunted by their fears of being buried alive in mud, or of being gut wounded and left to die in some water-filled shell hole in no-man's land, or of lying helpless in the darkness listening to the scufflings and squeaking of the enormous corpse-fed rats of Flanders coming closer and closer. But now they had to face it. The lost eyesight, the missing hand, or arm, or leg that had been their laisser-passer out of the muddy field to the hospital ships and home were absolute forfeits that would never be returned.

This shock was one in which I had shared at second hand. A most as soon as I had become aware that these blue-clad figure lining the boardwalk were soldiers who had been wounded in battl I had heard the phrase "on the mend" as a description of the stag of convalescence in which they were released, with their crutche and canes, to take a daily walk in the park. I had assumed that thi meant they were being kept in the hospital while their shattered o missing limbs grew back. So, in all innocence, one day I had aske an amputee how long it would be before his leg was all right again

That incident more than any other brings the color and feel o 1917 to me. Many of these wounded men used to bring scraps o bread and other leftovers collected at the end of their hospital meal to the park, to feed the ducks on the Round Pond or in the bays o the Serpentine. In kindness, and as a strategy for making contac with pretty maids and nannies, they would offer children from scrap less civilian households the privilege of taking part in the distribu tion of their largesse: "E're, sonny, take an 'andful, an' throw it t 'em. Don't be afrit or 'em. They won' gobble you up, greedly little blighters as they is." And a great pleasure it was, having gathered a crowd of ducks close to one's feet to promote an outburst of wing flapping and angry quacking by throwing a fourth or fifth handful of crusts over the heads of the thrusters and bullies to the more timid and retiring birds on the outer fringes of the mob.

What possessed me, on one of these occasions, to turn from the ducks to the man beside me, propped between the inverted V of his two crutches, to ask my appalling question, I will never know. ". . . come back?" he said in a bewildered way. "My leg?" And then, choking an incomprehensible "Sweet Jesus Christ," in an accent of fury, flung his paper bag from him into the pond and swung himself away on his crutches.

"Oh, master Anthony, 'ow could you!" cried Pearie, the cook-general-cum-nursemaid, who used to take me for my walks in those days. "That poor, poor boy . . ."

"But won't his leg grow back?" I faltered.

"No, never, not 'till his dying day, poor laddie," said Pearie, bursting into tears.

The ducks, who had scattered in panic when the paper bag had landed among them, had now gathered round it, and were pushing it to and fro as they tried to break into it with their beaks. Lifting my eyes from their water-polo, I looked about me and saw all the blue-clad figures dispersed throughout the park in a new light. They were no longer men who had been sent home to get well, but one-ned men, one-legged men, legless men, blinded men who would like that always, for the rest of their lives. This maiming, then, s what went on at the mysterious "front" that I had heard so ch about in terms of gallantry and high adventure, and of doing e's bit. I saw that life might be full of forms of "horridness" of ich I had never even dreamed.

This revelation came in the early autumn, and as the year ran wnhill into winter, with darkness coming a little earlier each y, I became extremely unhappy, because a chance remark of arie's had taken root in my mind. "Poor boy" she had said of e blue-eyed, flaxen-haired son of the couple in the apartment be- v ours, "it's his birthday in another month, and they'll be taking n for sure for their horrible war. It seems only yesterday that he s out of his short pants."

And so it was. In October, he vanished in his familiar mani- tation as a tall, shy schoolboy, and in November reappeared awk- rdly filling the space inside a second lieutenant's uniform. We t in the half darkness of the stairwell as I was coming in from afternoon walk in the haunted park. "Hallo, little 'un," he said, 've got something for you." He groped in the pocket of the trench at that he was carrying over his arm and produced a packet of the tterscotch toffee that had long since vanished from the civilian arket "for the duration" as the phrase went. When I'd thanked m, "properly," as Pearie always used to say, I asked him if he'd en to the front, desperately hoping that he'd say, "yes" so that I have tangible proof that one wasn't doomed, as soon as one be- me a grownup, to be transformed into one of those blue-clad fig- es with part of one's self gone.

"No, I haven't been out yet," he said, "I don't expect we'll be oing 'til after Christmas."

"Perhaps it'll be all over by then, with this revolution in Rus- a, and everything," Pearie said brightly.

"Perhaps it will, Pearie," said the boy-soldier from behind a ce that had suddenly become a mask. "Well I must be getting ong. Cheerio."

It was abruptly clear that for him "going out" was the ulti- ate permitted horizon, and that for sanity's and happiness' sake, e was not to be drawn into thinking what might lie ahead of him.

Then, in the deepest darkness of the year, it was suddenly hristmas, a Christmas made of nothing: of a pound or two of su- ar hoarded from the late-summer's special issue for jam-making; f raisins, sultanas, and nuts from heaven knows where; of a few ggs from a country cousin; of toys, including a marvelous tiny idewheel paddle steamer from a box hoarded in my grandmother's attic from a time back in the old Queen's century; of a few sprigs of holly from a street barrow, bought at an "outrageous" price; of a few pieces of colored paper and ribbon; of a tiny tree on a table top, carrying ten birthday-cake candles and some blown-glass ornaments from Bohemia treasured religiously from a day long before "they"—the glass blowers who had made these birds of paradise and angels—had been transformed into "the enemy," "the Huns," "the unspeakable Boche." The electric lights were put out when the candles on the tree were lit. The yellow glow from the tree mixed itself and was lost in the ruddy light from an extravagantly heaped coal fire which was gobbling up what remained of the December ration as if no January or February lay ahead.

In a moment of silence I looked round the room, at my mother; at her two sisters; at her "best friend" who had become a kind of honorary aunt to me; at Uncle Norman, Aunt Podge's husband, in his dark blue naval officer's uniform, who had survived two torpedoings to come to rest at safe harbor in the Admiralty at last; and at Geoffrey, the best friend's fiancé who was almost ready to "go out" again after his recovery from something arcanely described as a whiff of gas in the salient. His darkly handsome face, usually tormented, was entirely peaceful as he looked at his love. All the faces in the room were, as I had never seen them before, entirely happy. Standing beside my mother's chair, I leaned my head on her shoulder and broke the silence by saying "I should like it to be like this always."

"Christmas comes but once a year, you know," Uncle Norman said, reliably Scotch, as always.

"That's not what I meant," I said.

"You're half asleep, I can see," said my mother, "time you were in bed."

I didn't argue, or try to explain that I wanted the room, everyday, to be full of people united by love and warm with their belief in happiness. I allowed myself to be carried off without resistance. Dozing off in my bed, listening to the hum of the grown-ups talking, I knew that I had passed a critical point, and that I had recovered some degree of the confidence in life that had been shaken by my premature encounter with the realities of war.

On that episode I built my understanding of Christmas, as a feast of love and an affirmation in a dark (Continued on page 220)

On the bank of the Wawayanda River near the town of New Milford in Orange County, N. Y., there has stood for upwards of a hundred years a stone building that started out life as a gristmill, later became an applejack still, burned down, and by the middle of this century, was serving as an unofficial garbage dump. "A marvelous, ill-smelling fieldstone ruin" it seemed to Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Franck whose property it faced, its stonework reminding them of ancient buildings in Europe. Without having any particular plans for its use, they decided to buy it.

A few years later, Dr. Franck, a retired dentist who is also a writer and artist, went to Rome to attend the Ecumenical Council. Although not a Catholic nor a member of any church, he had been tremendously inspired by "Pacem in Terris," Pope John XXIII's opening speech at the second session of the Council, and he wanted to make on-the-spot drawings of what he felt was to be "the mightiest spiritual event of our century." With his pencil he recorded all of the Council's sessions, and his drawings have recently been published in a book called Outsider in the Vatican.

The summer after Pope John's death, Dr. Franck returned to New Milford. "I saw my mill ruin again," he explains, "and the moment I saw it, I knew what I had to do. It was already in my mind's eye a place of meditation, a call to tolerance, a testimony of peace. I wanted this to be one man's act of artistic faith. And it would be dedicated to Angelo Roncalli, John XXIII."

He was aided by two men who grasped and shared his idea. All the physical reconstruction—starting with the removal of 1,200 wheelbarrows of dirt and debris—was the work of a dedicated Orange County craftsman, Bert Willemse. With a young architect, Bill Phillips, Dr. Franck worked out the design of the roof, above left, which is supported by a 51-foot truss and symbolizes the flight of the dove of peace and of the Holy Spirit. The rest of the building—the general design, the sculpture, the stained glass, the carved wood—is Dr. Franck's own work and incorporates symbols from every religion.

On one side of the roof, above center, is a wood sculpture in low relief, in the center of which is an eye with a pupil of transparent glass that doubles as a tiny window. Inspired by words of the thirteenth-century mystic, Meister Eckhart—"The eye with which I see God is the same eye with which God sees me"—it seems to be looking at you wherever you stand in the building.

You approach the only entrance by a flight of stone steps that descend along the front of the building from the higher land at one side. As you walk down, you see thrusting up fro the ground in front of you the huge black Hand of Christ wit Stigmata, above, which Dr. Franck constructed with wood le over from the scaffolding. The great carved door (see previou page) represents the sun, the giver of life, and is set in th center with a jewel.

At your left as you go in the door is the pit where the mi wheel used to be, the water still there, 10 feet below the brink and around the top, a jumble of carved wood faces of Every man. Over the pit hangs a carved wood fish, ancient symbol o Christ, bearing three candles whose light is reflected in dozen of tiny mirror fragments tucked into crevices of the stone wall

Dr. Franck made the "stained glass" windows from second-hand plate glass on which he appliqué bits of colored scrap glass with transparent epoxy glue. The window over the pit depicts "The Fish and the Sun." In the floor in front of the pit he worked the Tree of Life, partly incised in concrete, partly inlaid with bits of glass and other objects found among the debris of the ruin. At the right of the door rises a series of stone terraces that symbolize the "pilgrimage from the deepest level (the water in the pit) to the summit where man transcends himself." The first terrace is paved with a number of symbolic mosaics including one made of scraps of mirror that distort both the building and the face of the viewer according to the direction from which he looks into it.

From one corner of the room, opposite page, a large wood angel, suspended from above, appears to be diving toward you —the apocalyptic angel. On the steps nearby stands a huge pillar-like candlestick made of iron, concrete, and glass on which are carved all the many names and concepts of God in the world's many religions. And finally, confronting the avenging angel from the other corner of the room, is Dr. Franck's sculpture in wood of Pope John, "the Man of Peace."

Although dedicated to a pope and called "Pacem in Terris," Dr. Franck's "transfigured garbage dump," he explains, "is not dedicated to any religion in particular but to all and to none." He often makes it available to his local community for small musicals, play readings, and other non-religious events. Principally, he thinks of it, not as a chapel, but as a reminder that "sheer existence is the greatest, always forgotten miracle."

In the transformed gristmill, glowing with candlelight, "a recorder consort" recently gave a recital of ancient Christmas music. Among their baroque instruments, a viola da gamba, recorders, and krummhorns.

THE MAKINGS AND THE RESULT

Spread out on the table, left, is everything you need to make papier-mâché ornaments from the raw Celluclay in the bag on the floor nearby. You start by adding water to the dry material to make the moldable doughlike substance in the bowl. Then you pack it with your fingers or a palette knife into a mold moistened with liquid detergent—or roll it out between sheets of wax paper and cut it with the wetted edge of a mold or cookie cutter. Before drying, you can top a cutout shape with a molded one, press fake jewels into the clay, insert steel screw eyes for hangers. Celluclay will take any kind of paint or varnish, and when dry, can be sprayed with clear plastic to give it a brilliant shine. The decorations on the tree, above—many of them repeated, opposite page—were designed and made for H&G by Renée. For shopping information, please turn to page 204.

Glistening ornaments you can make with instant papier-mâché

The strong, hard, lightweight composition the Victorians used for their delightful decorati fantasia is currently attracting new interest as the plastic basis for objects ranging fr swinging costume jewelry to serious sculpture. For Christmas ornaments like those on our c er, papier-mâché is especially apt because it can be fashioned into big bold shapes without coming too heavy to hang on the tree. And now you can make these baubles yourself from new instant papier-mâché called Celluclay that totally bypasses the tiresome old-fashion process of shredding and gluing paper. With a bag of Celluclay and a little tap water, y can make in a couple of afternoons enough ornaments for a whole tree and some imaginati one-of-a-kind gifts as well.

You can sculpt Celluclay with your hands, fill little molds with it, or roll it like dough a cut it into shapes with a cutting form or knife. You can also make it adhere to Styrofoam, woo en boxes, glasses, cans, and wire forms, to transform them into decorative objects. Cellucl dries to a hard stony consistency in the air, or you can rush the drying process in a 150° ove Hardened pieces can be painted and varnished (we recommend Liquitex Artists' Colors whic come in a brilliant range and dry quickly), or you can mix dried pigment into the wet Ce luclay. When hardened, the papier-mâché can be sawed, sanded smooth, nailed through.

The base material, dry and finely ground, comes in a storable plastic bag. When moistene and sealed in plastic, it will remain fresh in the refrigerator for weeks. Since it is nontoxic, it safe for children to use, and in every way (including quick cleanup) it is a fine means of gi ing them an active part in the family's exciting preparations for the Christmas holiday

BRILLIANT BAUBLES AND BANGLES

Jewelry designer Gretchen Dow created for H&G a group of papier-mâché necklaces, earrings, and pendants inspired by such diverse sources as Pucci prints, Christmas candies, and pinwheels. Jewelry like this can be used to festoon the tree, later removed and worn to holiday galas, or given away as flatteringly personal gifts.

A small gem of a house where reason and poetry meet

An erstwhile fishing village, Naples, Florida is one of the prettiest towns in the Sunshine State for an admirable reason—no new house may be built in its Port Royal area (a sparkling new residential section) unless its design is approved by a civic arts board. In this American Portofino, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Van Peet Robinson spend their winters in a small gem designed by architect I. W. Colburn—a paradox of a house in its wedding of simplicity with an ineffable air of grandeur. The Robinsons—he is an art dealer and a mentor of young painters, she, Rosemary Robinson, A.I.D., is an interior designer—asked for a reasonable facsimile of a Mediterranean villa, and got both reason and poetry. For the house, which consists basically of only three rooms, is designed in the classic idiom Mr. Colburn has made his cachet—podium-borne Palladian arches forming an arcaded shell around glass walls and crowned by a bull's-eye-pierced parapet. Aptly, the Robinsons call their house La Serenissima, but it might also be called Il Arcobaleno, for enough color has been poured into it to arch a rainbow. (Continued)

The living room: symmetry and a play of color

At one end of the living room, left, is a beautifully ordered arrangement framed by two rare vitrines found in a Tuscan farmhouse kitchen and bought on the spot. Atop them, "to pull the eye up," are two gilded Buddhas, and between them, a precisely hung group of paintings by Richard Segalman. The sofa is a flower bed of pillows—one covered with fragments of an old chasuble—that repeat every color in the room. At the other end of the room, below, Mrs. Robinson has hung a Janet Folsom abstract above a Louis XV commode, and flanked a table draped in chintz inspired by a Famille Rose pattern with painted, zebra-striped versions of the fruitwood chairs in Harry's Bar in Florence.

White duck curtains are hung, Italian style, on an outside track between glass doors and arch where they can keep out sun's heat as well as glare—an almost mandatory maneuver in Flori

Plan of house is a simple rectangle with a guest house wing. Hall between living room and bedroom is banked with closets—one for stereo.

Silver-haired and blue-eyed, Mrs. Robinson explains with charming candor that s decorates the house around herself (a decorating philosophy that she recommends whol heartedly to all her clients). She loves Chinese porcelain colors—the azalea pinks co plemented by azure blues, soft greens, and yellows found in Famille Rose—and sin these hues become her, she has also dressed her house in them, both as a background f herself, and for the trophies of a lifetime of collecting. Over the years, rampaging arou the world in search of paintings and antiques for their respective businesses, the Robi sons have amassed enough furniture, pictures, and bibelots to stock two shops, two a galleries, and two houses—one, a summer place, in Michigan. They dote on Italian an French furniture which they track down in palazzi, villas, country garrets, and back a leys. The grander pieces Mrs. Robinson relinquishes to clients. Some of the simpler on —which she finds more endearing—she has kept to furnish La Serenissima.

She loves to entertain, but only at seated dinners (loathes cocktail parties) with minimum of ten guests—preferably eight. Since she has an arsenal of porcelai earthenware, and glass ("I'm a pack rat!") she can vary her table settings almo ad infinitum, although the color motif is apt to remain constant. This is a vie en ro house. It is also a house of superbly organized, elegant clutter. Yet, laden as the roon are with ornaments, pictures, and memorabilia, the blank spots are plotted as cunningl as the busy ones to create a total so thoughtfully planned as to be both titillating and u terly tranquil. When the Robinsons named their house La Serenissima, they meant i

The Robinsons' "dining room," opposite page, is an ivory-tower extension of the living roon —a half-round bay lighted by a skydome by day, by recessed downlights at night. An indefatigable combing of Florence produced eigh matching Directoire chairs ("too good to be true") and a delectable pair of cherub wal brackets. A plant-worthy plant window

How you can turn a pair of simple double-hung windows into a miniature conservatory

Success with indoor plants is largely dependent on the devotion with which they are accommodated and cared for. Those in H&G's plant window receive softened westerly sun, and the ones on the glass shelves at the right get reduced south light. Plants in right half of window (keyed to diagram above) include:
1. Tradescantia albiflora, one of a large group of closely related plants that also include the commelina and zebrina genera. 2. Episcia cupreata, cousin of the African-violet. 3. Adiantum tenerum 'Wrightii,' one of the maidenhair ferns. 4. Cyrtomium falcatum, holly fern. 5. Pteris ensiformis 'Victoriae.'
6. Adiantum cuneatum, another maidenhair. 7. Davallia feejeensis plumosa, growing in osmunda root.
8. Pink and white fuchsia.
9. Pelargonium crispum variegatum.
10. Rhoeo spathacea 'Vittata.'
11. Polypodium aureum undulatum. 12. Rex begonias.
13. Nephrolepis cordifolia 'Duffii.' Cachepots, to help maintain humidity, from Azuma.

When you are cooped up all winter in a room with a lot of plants, they had better be good. Because if you cannot enjoy them, you may come to loathe them in short order. To be truly enjoyable to housebound people, housebound plants must be well chosen to begin with, then well cared for and handsomely displayed. With all this firmly in mind, H&G moved into the west end of a city apartment bedroom and built a special showcase for a few good plants already there and a lot more that we felt would prosper there under proper conditions. We designed our plant window to meet three essential requirements: that the whole window be good to look at; that it provide as favorable an environment as possible for the plants; that it simplify the care they would require to perform at their best. The first of these requirements is often met easily enough, at least on a short-term basis, when the plants are newly installed. The second and third are interrelated to a surprising degree, and take a little more doing.

The windows we had to work with were the ordinary double-hung type found in the vast majority of houses and apartments, and they could be kept closed since the room had a third window to supply ventilation. To increase the display space, we built plywood alcoves at right angles to the windows at each end, and fitted them with adjustable shelves of thick tempered glass (flowerpots are heavy) which would not impede the essential transmission of light. At sill height we built a broad shelf of waterproof plywood covered with Formica, and we insulated it from radiator heat by leaving an air space and providing a protective asbestos baffle. Wood trellis strips were added below the shelf to conceal both the radiator and spacious storage cupboards, and to give the bay a decorative outdoor-garden look. Then the whole embrasure was painted with an everything-proof epoxy paint, which allows for easy watering without risk of damage from drips, and for as much misting and spraying with water or pesticides as the plants require. Since the floor was treated with a clear epoxy finish, spilled water is merely a minor swabbing problem.

Also easily washable are the pretty, but inexpensive, semi-sheer cotton café curtains that we hung at the windows. They may be drawn in order to temper the western sun, which is frequently too strong for many house plants—and in winter, to veil the cold glass surface to which plants as well as people lose heat all too readily. (Continued)

Syringing of foliage with plain water is essential for staghorn fern and desirable for other plants. Same well-designed hand sprayer serves equally well for insecticide which may be needed occasionally in any plant window to control inevitable pests.

Humidity is kept where it belongs

Designed to provide livability for people as well as plants, our garden bay makes an attractive place to sit—the nearest thing to a conservatory most bedrooms can afford. (The notion that it is injurious to sleep in the same room with plants is an exploded old wives' tale.) The room is air conditioned in summer (fine for people, bad for some plants). But the very shape of the bay tends to encourage a humid atmosphere (fine for both plants and people). The floor-length curtains of printed cotton may be drawn across the whole space to help retain the humidity, to protect the plants from drafts when the third window is open, or to shade the room without depriving the plants of light.

It is no harder to grow plants prettily and well indoors than it is in a summertime garden providing you give them the basic care indoor conditions demand. Water is the chief answer—water in the right amounts, with or without plant food dissolved in it and whether applied to the ambient air as vapor, to the foliage as fine mist, or directly to the roots. And ease of watering is what our plant window is designed for. That it works as planned is evidenced by the duck's-back ease with which all the exposed surfaces shed water, by the shadowless way the glass tumbles the light downward from shelf to shelf, and by the calibrations on a hygrometer that registers a markedly higher relative humidity in the window area now than it did before the project was begun.

Plants in left half of window include a staghorn fern on reveal, columnea 'Yellow Dragon' (see Gardener's Month, page 212) in hanging basket, a maidenhair, a striped dracaena, and a brilliant gloxinia on shelf below. A FRESH SPRING OF IDEAS BUBBLING IN AN ANCIENT LAND

BY DENISE OTIS

The wealth of fresh decorative inspiration to be found in Lebanon was the magnet, alluring but little advertised, that drew H&G to this tiny country at the eastern end of the Mediterranean. Our rewards were not only a host of borrowable ideas in a diversity we hadn't dreamed of, but also a distinguishable and invigorating design point of view worth pursuing. Lebanon shares with the rest of the Middle East and with North Africa a traditional manner of building and furnishing, and a repertory of decorative motifs that is a distinctive heritage of Islamic culture. It is a look that goes under as many names as it has local variations—Turkish, Arabic, Moorish, Moroccan, Near Eastern—and a look that H&G predicted last January would be of increasing importance as a source of inspiration for contemporary American living. Its characteristic elements are parades of arches; elaborate inlaid or pierced and fretted ornament; complicated plays of pattern contrasted with serene spaces; rich textures in fabrics and carpets set against cool surfaces like marble, tile, or plaster; low tables; low banquettes piled with cushions; an interplay of terraces and courtyards, pools and fountains. It is a style that lends itself to a wide variety of interpretations, luxurious or humble, but even at its most elegant, it has a seductive air of comfort and sociable informality.

Lebanon: a fascinating and varied decorative heritage

We found so many provocative versions of the Islamic look in Lebanon—in turn-of-the-century Beirut villas, age-old village houses, nineteenth-century palaces and modern country houses—that we made only one excursion beyond its borders, in spite of the fact that Lebanon is a natural base for exploring the neighboring lands of Syria and Jordan. This was a day's trip to Damascus, a two-hour drive from Beirut, prompted by that city's inseparable historic links with Lebanese architecture, decoration and crafts. (For the delights of Damascus and the rest of Syria and Jordan, see Doone Beal's account of her visits to these countries on page 209)

In addition to its fascinating design tradition, Lebanon has an irresistible—and equally idea-inspiring—tradition of hospitality. If you arrive in Beirut with but one letter of introduction, within days you find yourself with a host of invitations, and of new acquaintances eager to entertain you and show you their country. If, as we often did, you stop to explore a picturesque country village, you are usually surrounded by a friendly crowd, pressing, with appealing friendliness, invitations to visit their houses. And almost the moment you step into a Lebanese home, you are offered tiny cups of sweet and fragrant Turkish or Arabic coffee, or tall iced glasses of lemonade. We swiftly learned to adjust our schedules to the rituals of hospitality, for we found it was impossible without rudeness to leave a house until we had been served coffee or lemonade, or, more often, both, with a suitable interval between. It was not a very difficult adjustment to make. And, predictably, we gathered a number of engaging ideas for preparing and presenting food and drink and for arranging plants and flowers: coffee brewed with ground cardamom or topped off with a few drops of orange or rose water; chilled fruit dipped in aromatic rose water just before serving; a fountain decked with floating flowers for a party; flower arrangements on the floor—a (Continued)

Lebanese food is worth a book in itself, and fortunately there are several available. We were particularly drawn to mezze, a word usually translated as appetizers, but more accurately described as an institution. A few mezze do make a great accompaniment to drinks. But a real assortment—savory pastes of chick-peas, eggplant, or parsley and sesame oil; raw and pickled vegetables; a variety of spicy salads; olives, nuts, and roasted seeds; cheeses, sausages, and hot pastries filled with meat or spinach—is a meal in itself, with or without the addition of some broiled fish or brochettes of grilled lamb. Mezze make a wonderful menu for talkers. Translated from the Lebanese: piquant party touches, buoyant decoration

Putting to work on home ground the ideas and artifacts you collect abroad is almost as much fun as collecting them. We couldn't resist trying out some of the many eminently borrowable ideas we gathered in Lebanon. In several of our interpretations we used some of the treasures we found in the shops and souks of Lebanon and Damascus; but most of them are, and all could be, carried out with things you can buy here, or with things already on hand.

1. Far too handsome to wash with, colorful carved and marbled soap from the souks of Tripoli is better piled in a glass compote to provide decoration, provoke conversation.
2. A stunning and sensible scheme for a combination study and guest room in the Islamic manner, freely adapted: Inspired by traditional Middle East seating arrangements, a U-shaped wooden platform, striped with black and white strips of vinyl (usually between floor tiles), supports three 3-inch foam rubber mattresses to make a double-purpose banquette. The piles of multi-patterned pillows, bed-pillow size, can be shifted at will for comfortable lounging or television-watching—another Islamic notion. Hand-woven, hand-blocked cotton fabrics were found in the Damascus souks. Wool rugs come from the Gaza Strip. Painting by Will Insley, courtesy of the Stable Gallery, New York.
3. After-dinner espresso proves, on experiment, to be as receptive to a last-minute dash of flavoring as Turkish or Arabic coffee. To experiment further with this Near East custom, you might try orgeat or falernum in addition to the traditional orange or rose water, or add a dash of cinnamon or cardamom to the coffee before it is brewed.
4. Card table set for an easy-to-serve meal: a simple selection of mezze–hommos (a paste of chick-peas and sesame), taboule (a green salad with bulgur wheat), stuffed grape leaves—to be eaten, Lebanese style, at the same time as the brochettes of lamb, tucked in wedges of Arab bread to keep warm. The beverages: beer, and arak mixed with ice and water. The cotton tablecloths were borrowed from the bedouin; they use them as head scarves.
5. Party fruit platters produced by combining ideas from two different Lebanese hostesses: whole fresh fruit served on a bed of ice, cherries tied in bunches and dipped in rose water before serving—ideas with a whole range of intriguing possibilities. The garnishes of mint and rose-geranium leaves are touches we thought up.
6. Adapted from displays in the Beirut souks, the centerpiece of symmetrically piled strawberries finished off with a topknot of daisies. Other translations from the Lebanese: a hand-woven bedspread used as a tablecloth, a carved wood bread stamp as a trivet, ornamental butter pats formed in wooden molds traditionally used for pastries. Shopping information see page 204.

FOLDAWAY FAIRY-TALE PLAY HOUSES

you can make in time for Christmas

Gingerbread Gothic cottag for an energe St. Nicholas

Inspired by a real cottage at Martha's Vineyard, our Gingerbread Gothic screen is especially delightful finished in confectionery colors: white walls, bright blue window frames, pink door frame and curlicues. Screen measures 48 inches fr ground to horizontal line of roof—large enough in scale for a three-year-old to peer in window.

No parent, remembering his own childhood, could underestimate the hours of joy that a playhouse would mean for his offspring. But almost any parent, considering a playhouse in the grim light of practicality, might have misgivings. Where do you find room to set up a playhouse? How and where, when the time comes, would you ever store it away? How could you take it with you if you moved?

All such killjoy questions are happily and plausibly answered by two playhouses—a Gingerbread Gothic cottage and a crenellated keep—designed especially for H&G by Elizabeth Logan. Properly speaking, they are play screens, not houses, but they serve equally well as imaginative settings for uncountable hours of make-believe. Each screen consists of three panels hinged together and so light in weight that two children, unassisted, could set them up anywhere—outdoors on a sunny day, indoors when the weather glowers. Both fold flat for toting back and forth and for storage in the closet or under a bed. Or, when not serving as stage sets for more dramatic action, they could be used as you might use any standing screens, to hide the nursery Bathinette or other unpretty equipment. Or the screens could be hooked to the wall to become decorative murals.

To make either of the play screens is a blessedly simple project. All you need are two 4-by-8-foot sheets of Fome-Cor—a material similar to Styrofoam, but faced on both sides with paper—plus a few other common tools and materials. On page 215 is a detailed list along with drawn-to-scale diagrams of castle and cottage and complete instructions for constructing and finishing them.

Turreted cast for a dreamy Rapunzel

Our castle screen was covered with fabric, crayon-dyed to resemb ancient masonry (see page 215), but it might have been paint or covered with brick patterned wallpaper. Square tower at right measures 58 inches fro ground to top edge of tallest side—about right for a three-year-o Rapunzel to make a dramatic appearance b standing on the seat of a high chair.

WINE FOR HOLIDAY FEASTS

By HUGH JOHNSON

Choosing wines to go with holiday food reminds me of the man in the cartoon who has been found by his wife in the kitchen, cutting himself a large slice from a virgin three-tier wedding cake. "I'm sorry," he is saying, "but how was I to know you were keeping it for anything special?"

How are you to know which are the wines for anything special? The holiday season with its richer, more lavish food obviously calls for richer, more lavish wines to do it justice. But what are they, and how do you recognize them? By the fancy label? By the shape of the bottle? By the price?

The sensible and smart thing to do is try out ahead of time a few likely candidates in the fine-wine category that will complement the food you are planning to serve. You are not likely to find this much of a hardship! Try to spend a half-hour with the manager of your local liquor store, going over the possibilities, and taking home a half-bottle or two to approve and compare. Once you decide, by the way, make sure that you order your wine—and get it delivered—early. Then you will be sure of getting what you want, rather than just what happens to be left in stock on Christmas Eve. And by having the wine safely under your roof a fortnight ahead of time, it will be in good condition when you open it, having had the vital two weeks to settle down.

First of all, you will need a principal wine for the principal meal of the holiday—a wine that will go with the turkey, the ham, the goose, or whatever you are having. Taking into account the sauces and side dishes, the hors d'oeuvre and the dessert, the traditional Christmas Day dinner adds up to a heavy, rich meal. A wine that is in any way meager or feeble will seem doubly so with such food. At such a time you need a fine, forcefully flavored wine.

Whether that wine is red or white is entirely up to you. While beef and lamb are pretty well committed to red wine (except for people who prefer white wine to red on every occasion, regardless), most of the game, poultry, and other traditional main dishes that appear at Christmas are a toss-up. For turkey, ham, and goose there are adherents on, as it were, both sides of the fence. As turkey has both red and white (dark and light) meat, you may find that those who like the breast may well prefer white wine with it, while those who go for a drumstick are more likely to want red. As you are going to need more than one bottle anyway, I see no reason not to indulge them both. On my Christmas Day table I like to set out both and let each guest choose his favorite.

White wines to serve at Christmas dinner

When it comes to choosing the white, there can be no question for me—it will be a Rhine. Among the heavier, more forceful white wines—wines, that is, with the touch of gentleness not quite amounting to sweetness that makes them festive drinking—pride of place is taken by the wines of the Rhine, but only the best of the Rhine wines. The ordinary ones by no means have this quality. From the southern Rhine vineyards come the Rieslings of Alsace (good value these: an Alsace Riesling Reserve Exceptionelle may well cost half as much as will its nearest equivalent from Germany). The vineyards of the northern Rhine supply the classic Rheingau and Palatinate growths, the noble names of Forster, Deidesheimer, Rauenthaler, Johannisberger, Hattenheimer, Rüdesheimer, and many more.

The vintage to choose now, for the less expensive (but still not cheap) grades of these Rhine wines, is 1964. A 1963 could be a find—it could also, unless it is a great growth, be weak. Be wary with 1963 and older vintages. Look for the selected pickings, the spätleses and ausleses, which, with their extra sweetness, keep and improve longer than the regular, lower priced wines.

There are those who think—with much justification—that there is no finer wine, at Christmas or any other time, than a Moselle.

Savory Stuffing Cook Book

By Iris Brooks

At holiday time there is no doubt that it is the stuffing that makes the bird. Now that roast turkey is no longer just a Thanksgiving or Christmas treat, but as familiar a sight spitted on the outdoor barbecue as sitting on a platter on the dinner table, it is the unctuous blend of chestnuts and oysters that transforms it into a special, seasonal feast. Duck, relished during the year in the haute cuisine style of duck à l'orange or duck Montmorency, takes on a sturdier, closer-to-home significance when plumped out with a Pennsylvania Dutch stuffing. Stuffings supply the complementary taste, the contrast of texture, the unexpected element not only for poultry and game birds, but also for roasts, fish, and humble vegetables. The clever cook uses them every month of the year, knowing that "for every season she hath dressings fit." A spicy East Indian dressing could stuff the sea bass served at a summer luncheon, or a rich combination of noodles, mushrooms, and sour cream fill out a fat capon for an autumn dinner party. On the roster of international recipes, there are flavorful fillings to enhance a fish, stretch a roast, or turn vegetables into a satisfying supper dish. Based on meat, seafood, vegetables, fruits, and nuts, fillings range from the rib-sticking to the light and delicate. The same dressing may prove as suitable for winter squash as for goose. When you are making a stuffing, don't stint. Any overflow can be baked in a well-greased casserole and basted with pan drippings or melted butter. If you are preparing stuffing for vegetables, you may, if you like, add to it part of the pulp removed from the shell. As seasoning is, in more than one sense, a matter of taste, always check to see that it's just the way you like it by precooking a tiny bit of stuffing, tasting, and adjusting seasoning to suit. Remember that any stuffing expands considerably during cooking, so stuff lightly. Be sure to stuff just before cooking, so there is no chance of the mixture spoiling. Before putting cooked foods in the refrigerator for storage, always remove the dressing and wrap it in foil.

When calculating quantities in the following recipes, allow roughly 1 cup of dressing per pound of poultry, and rather more than ½ cup per pound for meat and fish. Some stuffings bulk more after cooking, so you will find this a fairly generous estimate.

MEAT STUFFINGS

Relleno Criollo

A south-of-the-border favorite that is especially good with any of the drier game birds or Rock Cornish hens, the coarser fish, and veal, eggplant, tomatoes, squash, onions, and peppers.

1½ cups diced, cooked ham
3 cups crumbled corn bread
1 small onion, grated
2 tablespoons chopped parsley, or 1 tablespoon each chopped parsley and coriander
1 tablespoon chili powder
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon each cumin and pepper
1 egg
¼ cup melted butter

Combine ingredients in order given. Toss lightly. Makes a scant 5 cups.

Eastern Shore Dressing

A perfect stuffing for turkey and almost any other kind of bird.

½ pound pork sausage meat, preferably smoked
1 set giblets (from turkey or selected bird), ground
1 cup minced green pepper
1 cup minced celery
½ cup minced onion
½ cup minced shallot
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 cup finely chopped walnuts
½ cup minced mushrooms
4 hard-cooked eggs, riced
2 teaspoons each chopped parsley and celery leaves
6 cups crumbled corn bread
2 tablespoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 large bay leaf, crumbled
Broth or boiling water

Sauté the sausage meat and ground giblets 4 minutes in a large skillet, then remove. Add to the pan drippings the pepper, celery, onion, shallot, and garlic, and sauté 5 minutes. Add the walnuts, mushrooms, eggs, parsley, celery leaves, corn bread, and seasonings. Mix well, then add enough broth or boiling water to bring dressing to desired consistency. Makes about 14 cups.

Saracen Veal Stuffing

A different dressing for turkey, especially a smoked one.

2 cups buckwheat groats
1 egg
4–5 cups broth or water
⅔ cup melted butter
2 pounds veal shoulder, ground
½ cup each oil and butter
1¼ cups chopped, cooked mushrooms
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon each pepper and marjoram or oregano

Toast the groats in a heavy skillet over high heat, shaking constantly, for a minute or two. Lower heat; stir in the egg thoroughly with a fork. Cook, stirring, until groats are dry and each grain coated with egg. Add 4 cups broth and let buckwheat simmer until tender, about 35 minutes, adding more liquid as necessary to prevent scorching. The broth should be absorbed completely. Add the melted butter and toss groats lightly with a fork to prevent lumps. Brown the veal in a large skillet in the oil and butter. Combine with the groats, chopped mushrooms, chopped parsley, salt, pepper, marjoram or oregano. Mix together thoroughly. Allow the stuffing to cool before using. Makes about 11 cups.

Since you'll only have dinner once tonight, why not do it right the first time?

ONE OF FIVE SPARKLING WINES BY PAUL MASSON VINEYARDS, SARATOGA, CALIFORNIA, © 1966

Lancaster County Stuffing

A Pennsylvania Dutch specialty particularly suitable for goose, duck, or a fat capon.

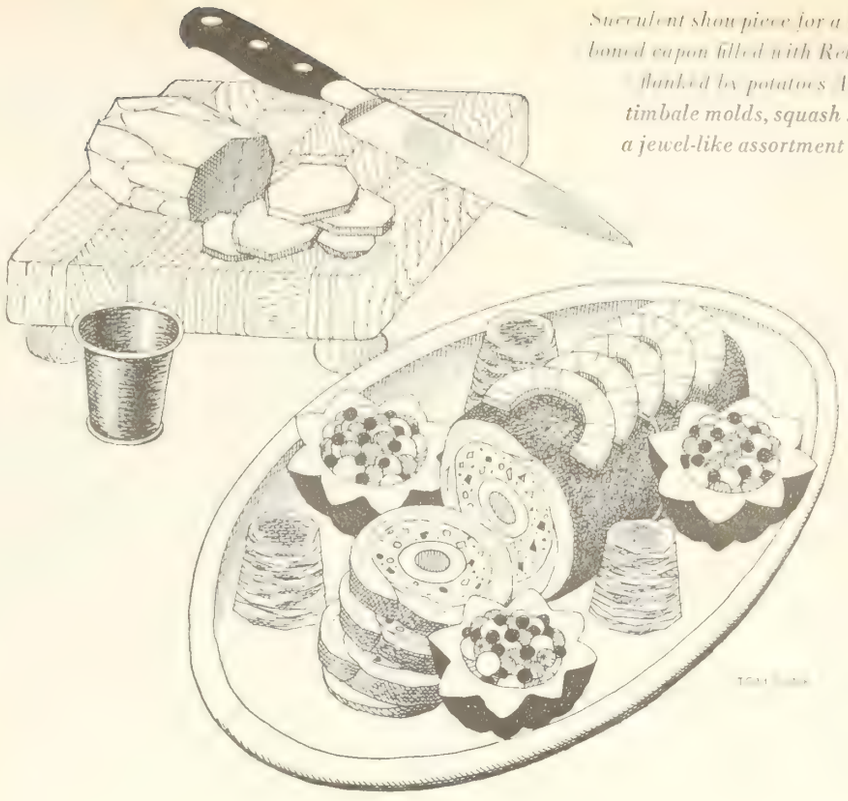
1 large onion, sliced in eighths
1 small clove garlic, minced
⅓ cup rendered poultry or bacon fat
6–8 ounces any liver, chopped
⅓ cup chopped celery
2½ cups mashed potatoes blended with ½ teaspoon baking powder
4 cups croutons
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon each savory and sage
Dash rosemary

Sauté the onion and garlic in a large covered skillet in the fat until golden brown. Add the liver and cook, stirring, until it loses color. Add the celery and cook, covered, about 3 minutes. Scrape the bottom of the skillet well, and add the sautéed mixture with the drippings to the mashed potatoes. Add all other ingredients and blend thoroughly. Cool before using. Makes a generous 9 cups.

Port-au-Prince Dressing

An unusual stuffing for turkey or other birds, veal, tomatoes, cucumbers, squash, chayote, rutabagas, onions, peppers, beets, and cabbage rolls.

½ pound dried black mushrooms
½ pound pork loin or shoulder, diced fine
¼" slice salt pork, diced
3 kosher frankfurters, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon oil
3 scallions, including tops, minced
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon each Tabasco and thyme
1 cup raw rice
1 medium green pepper, cut julienne



Snip the mushrooms into bits with kitchen shears. Cover with 2½ cups hot water and soak 30 minutes, squeezing occasionally to darken the water. Sauté meats and garlic in oil in a large skillet until browned. Add the softened mushrooms in their liquor and the remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil, then lower heat, cover, and simmer until liquid has been absorbed, about 15–20 minutes. Cool dressing before using. Makes approximately 8 cups.

Relleno Filipino

This stuffing adds a Latin flavor to a boned bird or breast of veal, or beef heart.

1 pound pork shoulder, ground
2 chorizos, halved and thinly sliced
3 large tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and chopped
2 large onions, finely chopped
1 cup chopped sweet mixed pickles
¼ cup Spanish brandy
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon each cayenne and cumin
2 hard-cooked eggs

Toss all ingredients but eggs together, lightly but thoroughly. Use to stuff a boned capon or breast of veal. Stuff firmly (this is an exception to the general rule) with ⅓ the stuffing, then press one egg into dressing and add the second third of the stuffing. Repeat with the second egg and the balance of the stuffing. Braise or roast, basting with white wine and flame with more brandy, just before serving. Serve hot, or cold with an aspic glaze if desired. Makes about 6 cups dressing.

Succulent show piece for a buffet dinner: boned capon filled with Relleno Filipino, flanked by potatoes Anna cooked in timbale molds, squash shells bearing a jewel-like assortment of vegetables.

Bacon and Chestnut Dressing

A hearty stuffing for turkey and other poultry; or for flank steak, beef heart, breast of veal, cabbage, turnips, tomatoes, peppers, and mushrooms.

3 medium onions, minced
1 stalk celery, chopped
½ pound slab bacon, diced
10 slices day-old bread, toasted and diced
1 pound chestnuts, cooked and coarsely chopped
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
¼ teaspoon each thyme and pepper
¾–1 cup broth or water

Sauté the onion, celery, and bacon until golden. Drain off all but 3 tablespoons of drippings and add contents of pan to the bread, chestnuts, salt, poultry seasoning, thyme and pepper. Mix thoroughly, adding enough broth or water to bring the dressing to the desired consistency. Makes about 7 cups.

Farce Henri IV

A delicate dressing for boiled or braised chicken, a whole head of cabbage, or vegetables.

2 cups stale bread crumbs
½ cup warm milk
1 set giblets, minced (optional)
¼ pound boiled ham, chopped fine
¼ cup chopped celery
4 large mushrooms, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
Dash each sage, thyme, and mace
1 egg, well beaten

Soak the crumbs in the milk for 20 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and mix all together well. Makes a good 3 cups.

Chateaubriand Stuffing

This traditional stuffing for goose is equally good for turkey and savoy or red cabbage.

3 pounds pork sausage meat, fresh or smoked
1 large onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1½ dozen chestnuts, cooked and halved
¼ cup cognac
¼ cup diced black truffle
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon each pepper and nutmeg

Brown the sausage meat, onion, and garlic lightly. Add with 3 tablespoons of the pan drippings to the remaining ingredients. Mix well.

Use white wine or a dry apple cider for basting goose, and for added bounce, flame after roasting with Calvados or applejack. Makes about 12 cups stuffing.

Farce Champenoise

A classic stuffing, excellent for chicken or a wine-basted cabbage head, or for cucumbers, rutabagas, turnips, summer squash, chayote, or mushrooms.

1 medium onion, chopped fine
1 clove garlic, minced
2 teaspoons minced shallot
3 tablespoons butter
¾–1 cup dry champagne or other dry white wine
2 chicken livers, minced
1 pound pork sausage meat
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper

Sauté the onion, garlic, and shallot in the butter in a large skillet until soft and faintly colored. Drain, add the wine and simmer until the mixture is reduced by half. Cook livers and sausage meat in another skillet for 5 minutes, and pour off all but about 3 tablespoons fat. Combine with the onion-wine mixture and remaining ingredients and mix together thoroughly. Makes about 5 cups.

SEAFOOD STUFFINGS

Yankee Clam Dressing

A down-East favorite for fish, but also good for onions, tomatoes, cucumbers, or eggplant.

½ cup chopped clams
2 cups fine cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons chopped sweet pickles or gherkins or India relish
½–⅔ cup clam liquor or water
1 egg (optional)

⅛ teaspoon black pepper or cayenne

Combine ingredients in order given and mix lightly, adding egg if a firmer dressing is desired. Makes about 2½ cups.

2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon anchovy paste
1 heaping cup soft bread crumbs
¾ cup minced, cooked shrimp
2 tablespoons chopped green or ripe olives
1–2 tablespoons grated onion
4 teaspoons lime juice
½ teaspoon Tabasco

Heat the butter, anchovy paste, and 1½ teaspoons water until the butter melts, then blend smooth. Add to bread crumbs and blend well. Add remaining ingredients. Makes a scant 2 cups.

¼ pound slab bacon, diced ¼"
1 medium onion, chopped
½ cup chopped green pepper
2 cups mashed potatoes
1 cup minced clams, drained
¼ cup chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon each celery salt, thyme, and pepper
⅛ teaspoon sweet paprika
Dash Tabasco
Dash nutmeg

Sauté the bacon in a skillet until golden brown, then remove. Sauté the onion in 3 tablespoons of the pan drippings in the same skillet until faintly colored. Add the green pepper and cook 1 minute more. Add the onion and green pepper with the drippings to the mashed potatoes, then blend in all other ingredients. Makes about 5 cups.

Oyster Stuffing

Superb for the Christmas turkey.

11 tablespoons butter
3 pounds chestnuts, cooked and riced, or 2½–3 cups canned unsweetened chestnut purée
2 teaspoons salt
¼ cup heavy cream
1 cup chopped celery
1 large onion, minced
8 cups day-old bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon each pepper and sweet paprika
⅛ teaspoon thyme (optional)
¼ cup chopped parsley

Melt 8 tablespoons of the butter and beat into the riced chestnuts with the salt and heavy cream to make a fluffy purée. Sauté the celery and onion in the remaining 3 tablespoons butter until limp. Add the remaining ingredients and mix all together well. Makes about 16 cups.

Relleno à la Zaragozana

1½ cups flaked lobster or crab meat, or chopped raw shrimp
2 tablespoons lime juice
2 tablespoons light Bacardi rum

1 tablespoon capers
1 teaspoon Tabasco
¼ cup diced hard ripe avocado

The holiday suckling pig, stuffed with Rhumba Dressing, is couched Hawaiian-style on a wood platter, a flower lei around his neck. Sautéed bananas and fluted orange shells filled with tiny glazed white onions serve as both the garnish and vegetable accompaniment.

Rhumba Dressing

Despite its Cuban name, this dressing comes from Hawaii, where it is a favorite for small suckling pigs. It may also be used for crown roast of pork, zucchini, eggplant, and artichokes.

6 cups soft bread crumbs
⅔ cup minced onion
4–6 anchovy fillets, minced
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Dash Tabasco
1 cup claret
¼ cup melted butter

Combine ingredients in a bowl in order given and toss lightly. Makes about 6 cups.

Oyster-Fry Stuffing

A stuffing that especially appeals to men, this goes best with turkey or capon.

2 dozen large oysters, shucked
Seasoned flour
2 eggs, beaten with 1 tablespoon oil and ½ teaspoon Tabasco
Cracker meal
11–12 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped onion
½ cup oil
¼ cup chopped celery
2 cups day-old bread crumbs
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon thyme
⅛ teaspoon each pepper and rosemary
1 tablespoon chopped parsley (optional)

Dip the oysters in the seasoned flour, then into egg mixture. Roll in cracker meal and let stand about 10 minutes. Melt 3–4 tablespoons of the butter until bubbling and fry the oysters until golden brown, about 1 minute on each side. Drain on absorbent paper. Sauté the onion in remaining 8 tablespoons butter and the oil until golden brown. Add the celery and cook about 3 minutes more. Add all remaining ingredients, except oysters, and toss together thoroughly. Stuff bird alternately with the crumb mixture and the fried oysters. Makes about 8 cups.

East Indian Dressing

A spicy stuffing for fish, particularly sea bass, snapper, and carp; also for chicken, crab shells, avocado, Chinese cabbage rolls, tomatoes, peppers, and cucumbers.

2 6½-ounce cans crab meat
1 cup stale bread, pulled into pieces
½ cup minced onion
½ cup grated coconut
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons peanut oil
1 tablespoon curry powder
1 teaspoon salt
Dash each turmeric and ginger
1 tablespoon chopped coriander
½ cup drained bean sprouts
1 egg

Drain the crab meat, reserving the liquid; pick over to remove any cartilage, then shred. Pour the reserved liquid over the bread, add a bit of water, if necessary, and let soak 10 minutes. Squeeze fairly dry and crumble. Sauté the onion, coconut, and garlic in the oil with the spices and coriander until golden. Add the bean sprouts and cook about 1 minute more. Combine with the crumbled bread and egg and toss all ingredients together. Makes about 4 cups.

VEGETABLE STUFFINGS

Parmentier Dressing

A hearty potato stuffing for birds, rolled beefsteak or a beef heart, pork, or veal.

6 large potatoes, peeled
2 medium onions
½ celery root
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup melted poultry fat or drippings

Put the potatoes, 1 onion, and the celery root through the coarsest blade of a food chopper. Dice the remaining onion and sauté in the butter until lightly browned. Add the melted fat, parsley, and seasonings, and cook 2 minutes. Drain the potato mixture and combine thoroughly with the other ingredients. Makes about 4 cups.

Dash beefsteak or Worcestershire sauce

Mix the noodles thoroughly with the egg and cream mixture. Simmer the mushrooms in the butter 15 minutes, seasoning with paprika and nutmeg. Stir in all remaining ingredients. Toss thoroughly with noodle mixture. Makes approximately 7 cups.

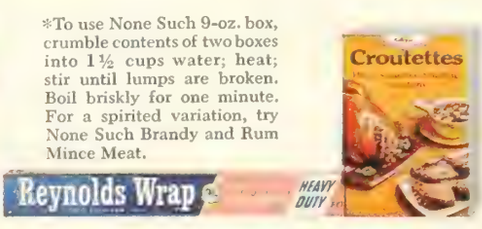
Tart-sweet Mince Meat makes this stuffing news.



And some great news it is! Borden's None Such Mince Meat has diced apples, raisins, currants, citrus fruit peel and spices to make turkey stuffing taste merrier than ever.

For a 12- to 14-lb. turkey, sauté 1 cup chopped onions in ¾ cup butter until onions are golden brown. In large bowl, mix sautéed onions, one 28-oz. jar of Borden's None Such Mince Meat*, two 7-oz. packages of Kellogg's Croutettes. Add ¾ cup water. Toss lightly until mixture is moistened. The best choice again are the spätleses and ausleses, even of the young 1964 vintage, for an ordinary-picking Moselle, even from an excellent vineyard, finds it hard to keep its end up at a feast. If you are having goose, Moselle is your wine. Bernkasteler, Graacher, Zeltinger, Brauneberger, Piesporter are some of the names to look for in the Moselles.

Wines for those who prefer red

At the other end of my table, looking even more tempting than the cool, tall bottle of Rhine wine, is the squat, cut-crystal carafe of red—either one of France's or California's most richly savory, scented, high-colored, lingering flavored wines. If it is French, it will be from the Rhône valley, from Burgundy or the hill country east of Bordeaux—the communes of St. Émilion and Pomerol. If it is Californian, most likely it will be a Cabernet Sauvignon from the Napa or Sonoma valley.

The Rhône reds have certain very real advantages: they are not a fashion, they are in fairly good supply, and their price remains below their comparative value. On the other hand, they need to be quite old before they begin to compare with Burgundy in quality and delicacy. If you can find a Châteauneuf-du-Pape or Hermitage of 1959 or earlier, or a Côte Rôtie of 1960, and if you like very strong flavored, dark, and tasty wine, you have the very thing to accompany a rich, long-drawn-out holiday meal. If the only Rhône wines you can find are of 1961 or later vintages, you will probably do better to choose something else—or, better still, to buy some bottles and keep them for a few years.

Fine Burgundies inevitably cost more. The important thing is to find one that justifies its price. Look for wines which carry on their labels the name of the vineyard after the name of the village—for example, Chambolle-Musigny Les Amoureuses (Chambolle-Musigny, the village; Les Amoureuses—Women in Love—the vineyard). Such wines are almost always better than plain village-named wines, where no vineyard is mentioned.

If you prefer heavier Burgundy, with more scent, body, taste, and power, choose a vineyard-named one from any of the following villages: Gevrey-Chambertin, Morey-St. Denis, Chambolle-Musigny, Vosne-Romanée, Nuits-St. Georges. Ideally, these wines should be of the 1959 vintage or earlier (the 60's were poor and the 61's are young yet; the 62's, although young, are good and ready very drinkable). If you fer a lighter Burgundy with m delicacy, a subtler fragrance, paler color, Aloxe-Corton, Beau Savigny-les-Beaune, Pomma Volnay, Chassagne-Montrach and Santenay are the names look for. Concentrate on the 196 or 1962's—nothing younger—a avoid 1960's and 1963's.

Among red Bordeaux, I wou single out St. Émilion and Pomer not because I believe them to superior to the Médoc and Grav producers of superlative, compa tively light wines, but because their slight extra body and ric ness. Even more important, wi the turnover of wines as rapid it is today, is that they need a litt less maturing than other Bordeau reds. A 1962 Pomerol may well b a fine wine now, while a good 196 Médoc is still too harsh to drin Among St. Émilions and Pomerol look for the 1960's (excellent now quite light but fruity and fine), th 1961's, and the 1962's. The bes growths of the 1961's should reall be kept another four years or so but those of the other two vintage make excellent drinking already Avoid 1963, and if you are of fered 1964 (which you might be) buy some and keep it for ten years. It will be wonderful, but no amount of wishful thinking will make it ready for this Christmas, or next.

The problem of the wine in the stores being short of its prime also arises with the best Cabernet Sauvignons of California. They are wines with great strength of flavor, color, and character. Seven or eight years is a good age for them, but those on the shelves are all too apt to be 1963's or even 1964's. Hunt until you find some 1959, 1960, or 1961 Cabernet from one of the fine Northern California producers—for my preference Louis Martini, Beaulieu, Charles Krug, or, if you live in California, one of the small wineries with limited local distribution.

The course of wines

Serving two wines concurrently at a holiday meal has another advantage—you can serve both in the classic progression of white wine before red.

A first course of smoked salmon or oysters or clams or caviar is best enjoyed with a chilled white wine. Give each guest two wine glasses, and he can start the meal with the white wine and decide later if he wants to go on to the red for the main course or stay with the white.

The only other wine you will then need for the principal meal

(and indeed it is really an elegant extra rather than a necessity) is a sweet wine for the dessert. Of these the choice is endless—from the obvious (and often very good value) golden Sauternes, best with fresh fruit, and the fabulously rare and expensive German trockenbeerenausleses (it seems a waste of the $40 or so a bottle to eat anything with them) to the often neglected Madeira. It is an eccentricity of my own to serve that wonderful old American favorite, sweet Madeira, with, rather than after, the dessert course. I find it delicious, my guests never exactly complain, and with creamy desserts it is superb. Malmsey and Boal are the types to pick; the others tend to be a bit dry with a sweet dish.

It stands to reason that finer-than-usual wine deserves a little more than usual care in its serving. There is no need for elaborate ritual. However fitting and amusing it may be at banquets of the Confrérie des Chevalier du Tastevin, it merely slows things down at home. What is there to serving wine? Nothing more than pouring it from bottle to glass at the ideal temperature. For red wines, experience tells us, at the temperature of a pleasantly warm dining room; for white, at the temperature of a pleasantly cool cellar. It is easy to achieve the right temperature: simply put the red in the kitchen for a few hours before the meal, the white in the refrigerator or a bucket of ice for an hour or so. Pull the cork an hour before you plan to pour the wine: not for any mysterious reason, but just to give it a breath of air. This is standard procedure with red wines, but I find it also benefits certain whites.

How many bottles?

To calculate how much wine to buy for the holiday season, consider your individual guests. You know your friends. Mine vary in capacity, over the whole course of a formal meal, from half a bottle to a whole bottle a head. There are six good glasses in a bottle of wine. Half a bottle a head only allows each person one glass of wine with each of three courses. I believe most people appreciate a second glass with the main course. I estimate one glass of white wine per head with the hors d'oeuvre, two of red (or white) with the main course, and one of sweet wine with the dessert. The average, then, is four glasses or two-thirds of a bottle a head. Those who fall below that amount will be made up for by those who go above it.

Always overestimate, rather than underestimate, your wine-buying needs. It makes sense to keep any surplus on hand for future celebrations; the wine will only improve with a few months' storage on its side in a dark cupboard (not next to the radiator).

Wines to serve at a buffet

With the subsidiary meals of the holiday season—the informal supper party or buffet, for example—the stress will not be so much on serving the finest appropriate wine, but on finding a light, refreshing wine that people will happily drink throughout a variegated meal. There is something wasteful about drinking really fine old wine at a buffet. For buffets, however well-organized and delicious, it is better to be generous with a modest wine, and, as choice is one of the charms of informal meals, have not one wine but two or three. One of the most cheering, welcoming sights I know is a row of carafes of different colors, gleaming among the buffet food. White, rosé, red—to offer the spectrum is to make sure that everyone gets exactly what he or she really wants.

The buffet weight reds are France's Beaujolais, California's Zinfandel, Italy's Chianti or Valpolicella. The whites are fresh, tangy, but not entirely dry Loire wines—Vouvray, Sancerre, Saumur—or for a seafood buffet the very dry, appetizing Muscadet, the light refreshing Swiss and Austrian whites (wines with less character and flavor than the German whites, but good in this context), young ordinary Moselles, or California's Chenin Blanc, Green Hungarian, or Emerald Riesling. All rosé wines come into this category—a California Grenache Rosé, French Anjou or Tavel, Italian Chiaretto or Ravello, or the semi-sparkling rosé of Portugal.

One wine I have not mentioned because it hardly seems necessary: champagne. Champagne comes naturally to mind when we think of celebrations. Nothing compares with it for getting a party off the ground, although some people (I am one) tire of it after a while, especially with food, and get a trapped feeling if they think it is to be the only drink of the whole evening. If you are going to have champagne at a buffet meal, it is a good idea to offer an alternative, such as a red wine. At a formal meal, you might serve a very dry champagne as the apéritif and with the first course, a still red or white wine with the main course, and then (if you like) a bottle of sweet champagne with the dessert.

Many of Lebanon's most interesting and individual attractions are not apparent at first glance. It takes time and an attentive eye to uncover them. On first view, for example, there is little to distinguish Beirut from any prosperous modern Mediterranean city, if your first view is that of most jet-age travelers—the drive from the airport through suburbs to the center of town. The single touch of the exotic is Arabic script in neon, a perfect mating of media. The most pedestrian message looks like an abstract sculpture in light. Upon exploration, however, Beirut turns out to have an unusually beautiful site between jagged mountains and a gently curving bay, and a very distinctive personality. A leisurely drive uncovers Victorian, Venetian-Islamic mansions of unbelievable and engaging fantasy dotted among the modern buildings, especially in the older residential quarters like the Achrafiyeh. Bedouins in traditional costume, and coffee and soft-drink sellers with elaborate brass or silver equipment mingle with smartly dressed men and women in the main shopping streets. The markets, or souks, are endlessly fascinating, endlessly changing mosaics of color and scent and movement. We could never enter the principal business section without refreshing ourselves with a detour through the adjacent flower souk. The principal markets are lodged in a labyrinth of streets and arcades between the Place des Canons (or Place des Martyrs) and the Place de l'Etoile, and they offer an incredible assortment of merchandise. One street is entirely lined with gold-sellers' shops, another seems principally devoted to a bewildering mixture of pots and pans, plastic shoes, and hypodermic needles. Our favorites were the fruit and vegetable souks with their heaps of apricots and cherries, strawberries piled in neat pyramids each topped with a daisy, and enormous baskets of mint that scented the air for blocks around. There is one important piece of etiquette that must be strictly observed in souk-prowling unless you want a nasty scene: if you wish to take pictures, always ask permission, and, if it is refused, do not press the point. Many Mohammedan sects—and half of the Lebanese people are of the Mohammedan faith—are violently opposed to being photographed.

Shopping could easily have monopolized all our time in Beirut; there are so many shops and they offer such a variety of temptations. With a little persistence, you can find almost anything you want from almost anywhere in the world. What we learned, to our surprise, required the greatest persistence were the products of Lebanese craftsmanship. But you can find them. An attentive eye in the souks will turn up such finds as colorful harness trimmings and hand-carved bread stamps and cookie molds. Artisanat Libanais in the ground floor of the Parliament building has embroidered table linens, sumptuous silk jackets, and thick wool abbas (the voluminous local cloak) in brilliant colors, all exquisitely done and expensive. In other shops, such as the Magasin Oriental, we uncovered handsome bedouin rugs in natural brown, black, white, or gray goat hair, woven cotton bedouin head scarves, and another traditional garment called a gombaz. We had noticed men wearing these semi-fitted robes of striped cotton in the street and were intrigued by their possibilities as an at-home costume for either sex. We found it impossible to limit our hunting to Lebanese crafts, however; Beirut shops have too tantalizing an assortment of products from all over the Middle East. One among the many that fascinated us: the wonderfully colored, wonderfully inexpensive wool rugs made on the Gaza Strip and sold in the Gaza Rug Store in the Hamra district.

It's not just the variety of things to buy that makes Beirut shopping such a time-eating occupation. Shopping is a social occasion involving much leisurely discussion. Shopkeepers ply you with coffee and soft drinks—and a great deal of persuasion while you make your selections.

Countryside close-ups

Beirut's magnetism is so much of the moment that you tend to forget that Lebanon's history stretches back six thousand years until you start out to explore the countryside. Even if your interest in ruined temples or buried cities is lukewarm, you will find the roads leading to Lebanon's principal ancient monuments sufficiently full of attractions to justify the trip. Our excursion to Baalbek started with a series of magnificent panoramas from the winding road that snakes up the mountains behind Beirut—the city and its bay glittering in the sun, the ranks of pine-covered ridges sprinkled with summer houses, and the neatly terraced towns above valleys pooled in mist. Over the crest of the Lebanon range, the slopes were bare and bedouin camps replaced the villas. Another twist of the road and we ed out across the rich farm- of the Bekaa valley with Mt. mon lightly traced in snow in distance. From there the trip me a series of close-ups: shops oned with thick tassels of red ellow cherries; massive grape- s trained to shade roofs and aces and windows; sugar-cov- nuts layered like a mosaic ement in a candy-seller's cart; brown earth scattered with p white towns, here clustered nd a church tower, there nd a minaret; and finally the osing columns of the temple ter of Baalbek, gold-washed by afternoon sun.

Most of the rest of Lebanon's portant antiquities are scattered ng the coast, for, as might be ected of a seafaring merchant ple, the great cities of the an- nt Phoenicians were seaports. poli, the northernmost, is prob- y the youngest, but in any case, found so much to interest us in souks of Tripoli that we had time to spare for its ruins. iped cotton canvas in a multi- le of beautiful colors, piled up the shops or stretched in sail- e lengths to shade narrow eets, was one of the treasures we uldn't resist. Another was the ap in white, carved with birds d flowers, or in marbleized balls brilliant colors.

Layers of architecture

Byblos, about halfway be- ween Tripoli and Beirut and the dest of the Lebanese cities, offers vo drawing cards: a tiny charm- ig modern village with an attrac- ve restaurant clustered at one de of a miniature medieval port, nd, across the harbor, the partly xcavated site of ancient Byblos, uried under so many layers of ities that it is like a three-dimen- ional jigsaw puzzle.

South of Beirut, the coast road vinds through aromatic groves of oranges and lemons and bananas o Sidon and Tyre. The cities, hemselves, proud in the riches against which Ezekiel thundered, have vanished. But Sidon's harbor, dominated by a crusader's sea fort whose walls are polka-dotted with sawed-off Roman columns, is still beautiful, and Roman Tyre (on a different site than the biblical city) has been sufficiently excavated so one can walk through its streets and rebuild it in the imagination.

Of all the places we visited, however, the past came alive for us most vividly at a Tuesday market in a small valley near one of the sources of the Jordan. We had been invited by the mayor of Ebel es-Saqi, a nearby village we had previously visited in order to photograph an enchanting and beautifully preserved 400-year-old farmhouse. To arrive at proper market hours we left Beirut at 5:30 in the morning, picked up our host a couple of hours later, and drove down to the valley. A leisurely bustle of buyers and sellers spread out around the ruins of a marketplace built by the Romans on a site which, we were told, had long been in use when they arrived. We joined the men inspecting cows and sheep and goats, bargained tongue-in-cheek for a baby donkey, and seriously and successfully for pottery. As the sun grew hotter, we moved under the trees and bought fabric from a village weaver while one of our companions negotiated for plastic bowls. About 9:00 we sat down on Roman stone benches to breakfast at a Roman stone table under a pavilion of lashed poles roofed with oleander cut from the river bank. Meat was cut as wanted from fresh-killed lambs hanging just outside, grilled at the table, wrapped in fresh bread and handed around. As we ate, our host and the other magnates of the valley held informal court, chaffed and joked, and dealt with the week's problems. We didn't understand a word, but we didn't need to. Sitting there, it was easy to slip back two thousand years. The clothes would have been different, made-in-Hong Kong plastic would have been made-in-Tarshish tin, but there would have been no difference in the life or look of the marketplace and its inhabitants.

What good is a dishwasher detergent if it's no good in your water?

Every dishwasher detergent manufacturer knows that no one dishwasher detergent works equally well in all kinds of water. Yet nobody does anything about it — except the makers of FINISH. They have developed special formulas of FINISH for different types of water. Before they send your Special Formula FINISH into your area they test it in various types of water prevalent in your area. They make sure that your Special Formula FINISH washes dishes cleaner and shines glasses brighter than any other detergent.

It stands to reason that the world's largest producers of dishwasher detergents wouldn't go so far out of their way to give you a better product if it weren't important. Nor would the manufacturers of all 28 makes of dishwashers approve it. Do you consider it important enough to try your Special Formula FINISH in your dishwasher?

I just couldn't believe that a little piece of brown cloth could stop my silver from tarnishing —and then I tried it, out of desperation. Well! Since I've wrapped my silver in Pacific Silvercloth, I haven't had to polish a single piece. It just doesn't tarnish! Because Pacific Silvercloth is embedded with tiny particles of silver that catch the elements in the air that cause tarnish. That's why my silver sparkles like new—without any polishing at all. Why don't you get Pacific Silvercloth in drawer pads, silverfiles, silver chests, wraps, bags, rolls and by the yard. At fine silver and department stores.

EUCLIDEAN CHRISTMAS PRESENT

For children and parents alike, a game to solve the mystique of the "new math"

With certain enviable exceptions, the average parent today feels that if he can tote up his checkbook with reasonable accuracy, do long division, and define an isosceles triangle, he is being repaid, to a degree, for the wit-addling he underwent as a child under a long series of math teacher-inquisitors. But when he is asked to help Junior with an x + y + z poser, he finds to his astonishment that he and his heir speak a different mathematical language. For this is the day of the "new math," a teaching process that, at first encounter, may seem utterly baffling to an adult who still "figures" in the old-fangled way. Mathematician Dr. Donald Inbody defines the mystery succinctly thus: "Traditional mathematics instruction has been concerned with 'how.' The new programs are concerned with 'why' and 'how.' " The "why," it would seem, is what makes math new.

What makes it fun (who ever thought of math as fun?) is an educational game for children and parents called the Cuisenaire Home Mathematics Kit—a game keyed to the present-day pattern of integrating algebra and arithmetic, and played with 155 multicolored wooden rods designed in equations of from 1 to 10 cubic centimeters. The kit also includes an explanatory booklet, a record to teach preschool tots how to count, and a set of 50 step-by-step "activity" cards that present a gamut of problems running from the basic to difficult.

MIEHLMANN

The wherewithal of knowledge: TOP, the "learn how to count" record for the very young, and, for the parent and child, the activity cards with their graded problems. ABOVE, the rods assembled in two formations—a pillar, a stair—and the explanatory booklet. The kit may be ordered from F. A. O. Schwarz in New York City for $13.25 ppd.

GOING PLACES, FINDING THINGS IN

SYRIA AND JORDAN

BY DOONE BEAL

Calligraphic caution striking enough to frame: this print, model for Syrian schoolchildren, translates, "Beware of him you have helped."

lthough the frontier between Lebanon and Syria is man-made, e difference in both climate and terrain is extraordinary. The d soil of Lebanon and the fertility of the Bekaa Valley give way the frontier post to the barren, ocher-colored stones of the des- t. It is only when you are nearly upon the Syrian capital, Damas- us, that the reason for its historic importance suddenly becomes bvious. A clear, strong stream gushes dramatically out of the dry illside to irrigate thick clutches of poplar and eucalyptus. Begin- ing as a ribbon, this oasis swells out to encompass the city, and eters away on the other side, leaving almost the impression of n island. Oldest of all the Arab capitals, the Pearl of the East, ie Eye of the Orient, and the city that the Prophet thought too eautiful to behold on earth, Damascus is worth at least three ays of a visitor's time. There is much to enjoy, and the climate n spring and fall is dry and sunny, with a desert nip in the air.

The journey from Beirut to Damascus takes rather less than wo hours by car (cars hired in Lebanon may be taken into Syria nd back, providing notice is given when you collect the papers), o many local and foreign residents of the Lebanese capital make he trip there and back in a day, just to shop. For shopping, Da- nascus is the more interesting of the two cities. Its souks are as xotic as any in the Middle East, and older than most. The smells n the souks are of roses, leather and jasmine. Sweets and sugared lmonds in livid violets, pinks, and greens are arrayed with the ntricacy of a Victorian paperweight. A seller of araksous has a ransistor radio hitched to his silver cups and tray. Heavy wooden gates lead into a dome-lit khan, where once the caravans and their oad spent a protected night. An overhanging gable of crumbling tone shelters a Roman column. A door, an archway, a huge wooden chest are decorated in the traditional colors of olive green, lull gold, and tangerine.

The antique dealers from Beirut and the connoisseur collec- ors have, between them, already picked over the most valuable icons and treasures from the great Damascene houses. Today's maginative souk shopper looks, instead, for pieces to convert to different purposes, such as the elaborately engraved silver or brass pannier-like carriers of the araksous vendors, which have three wells sunk into them for bottles. My American companion, who lives in Beirut, snapped one up for $60, intending to use it for flowers. She had already made a small display table from a bedouin coffee brazier that had a space for coals on one side and a brass lid on the other. The coal compartment she lined with velvet to display coins, shells, and other small objets, then put a piece of plate glass across the top. I saw many of these braziers in their original state selling for $15, and decided that with a grill laid over the coals one of them would be wonderful on a party table for cooking hors d'oeuvres and such. All the brass sellers cluster together in one street, so it is easy to compare prices.

The shops of Damascus are full of fascinating things. George Obid specializes in old coins, hanging lamps, and bedouin jewelry Some of the massive medallions, chains, and bracelets are only about $2, and you can have them gilded in a few hours, or have a pin fixed to the back. Obid also has hand-blocked cotton fabrics from Aleppo and charming folk paint- (Continued on next page) ings. Tony Stephan, 156 Souk Hamidiyeh, has a big variety of things for the house such as a tea set with silver tray and six glasses with engraved silver bases (marvelous also for martinis) at $160; chairs with slung leather backs and seats at $10, embroidered donkey bags (good pillow covers) and little clutch purses in pure silk brocade at $5. At Damascus Crafts, Souk Almiskieh (near the Omayyad Mosque) you will find Damascus glass and charming little brass peacocks designed to hold kohl, the original eye-liner.

Akel & Halabi, 63 Souk Hamidiyeh, sells wood and mother-of-pearl mosaics, old crystal and glassware, carpets, and embroidered damask tablecloths and pillowcases. A heavily woven embroidered bedspread costs about $5.

Most of the reputable stores in the souks will take travelers' checks (it is never wise in Syria to cash more than your immediate needs), but they are less willing—or reliable—when it comes to having heavy or fragile merchandise shipped. Better cart this back to Beirut by car and have it crated up and sent out from there. Inexpensive buys that pose no shipping or carrying problems are the enormously decorative black and white calligraphy prints, used as models by schoolchildren, that are sold in the stationery shops near the entrance of the Omayyad Mosque.

On Friday, the holy day, many if not all the shops in the souks are closed. Every day promptly at half-past twelve they draw the shutters, reopening about four and staying open until seven in the evening.

For antiques, Tarazi on Hariqa Square, just outside the main souk, is locally considered to be the most reliable. Here you find that collector's delight, opaline glass, either in turquoise or translucent milky white, and particularly pretty in slender-necked rose-water bottles. I saw a collection of these in a private house, all of slightly different heights and shapes, massed together on a glass shelf. Prices for real opaline can be high—from $10 to $30—but for a small sum I picked up some very attractive blue Damascene glass candleholders to hold single flowers on a table setting.

Another shopper's haven in the center of Damascus is Nassan Palace at Bab Sharqi, an old converted Arab mansion with an enormous selection of brocade. Here I was shown an easy and foolproof test of quality: take a small cutting in your hand and put a match to it. Rayon will flare, but pure silk hardly smolders. This is a perfectly permissible test to make, and no honest dealer will object. A good silk brocade costs about $6 a meter (39 inches).

If you want to see the true, traditional Syrian architecture and decoration, make a point of visiting the Azem Palace, built in 1785 for the Governor of Damascus. Richly patterned carpets contrast with cool marble ledges. Nothing is ever entirely flat or straight. A room will be divided simply by the raising of the floor level, and archways (seldom with a door) connect one room with another. Thus there are always vistas, and a wonderful sense of proportion. A chandelier is suspended low from a domed ceiling, or across an archway to lead the eye away from the height. A little arched niche, set deep in the wall, holds a single, slender silver pitcher. The most enchanting spot of all in the Azem Palace is the outer patio, shaded by colonnades of mosaic stone. In each of the arched recesses is a mirror, to reflect the trees and fountains and pools of the outer courtyard.

Very close to the Azem is the Great Omayyad Mosque, its courtyard flanked by a Roman arch. It is ethereal and voluptuous, with scores of soft rugs overlapping one another on the vast floor, prayer enclosures, set aside and slightly raised from the ground level, and a myriad slender lamps (each burning, at night, with a candle) hanging from a high, airy ceiling punctuated by a graceful forest of pillars.

Kaffa headdress worn by Jordanian soldier shows the bedouin printed scarf sold in the souks, converted to a tablecloth by H&G on page 185.

Earnest, sibilant guides explain chapter and verse of the long, confused history of the Omayyad. But sometimes an elderly Arab will raise his eyes from the Koran to grin slyly at the procession of tourists who come to gaze in uncomprehending awe at the beauty of the place he takes for granted. And it strikes you, without irreverence, that the soft carpets and the high, cool ceiling make the mosque a uniquely comfortable place to sit in.

Syrian food in general is typically Middle Eastern with few variations on the theme of stuffed vine leaves, mutton in various guises (at its best on the skewer, in a shashlik), and the sweet nut-and-honey pastries. In the average café (frequently, I should warn, dry) the simplest method is to pick what looks good from the refrigerated glass case rather than attempt to unravel the menu. One of the few really good restaurants, judged by international standards, is Romanoff. Here I had delicious pancakes stuffed with soft cheese, followed by their special version of shashlik which comes forth on swords aflame with rum, and an excellent local wine. Another good restaurant is Morocco, which serves such Damascene specialties as frogs' legs (excellent) and desert truffles (overrated). The Caves du Roi is a nightclub-cum-restaurant, with dancing and fair food.

From Damascus, given a tough car and a compass, you can make the trip over the desert to Palmyra in six hours (or, if you prefer to travel more comfortably, and speedily, there are daily flights). But if you are starting out from Beirut, the better road to Palmyra runs, straight and Roman, via Homs. Just before reaching that city you will see the great Crusader castle of Krak des Chevaliers standing majestically on i peak. The drive up to it, along winding mountain road, takes ov an hour each way. Not countin this detour, you should allow fou hours to get from Beirut to Hom and another two to reach Palmyr

The drive along the dese road has a quality of high r mance, for this was the origin caravan route to Baghdad an Samarkand. Bedouin tents ar pitched like huge bats against th pale, pure background of the de ert. The low hills roll to seemin infinity in every direction unti over the final brow appear th golden stones of Palmyra, embed ded in its oasis of palms. A hun dred miles from the nearest poin of civilization, it is overwhelmin to behold. In spite of the ravage of the desert and a couple o earthquakes, a surprising amoun of this second-century city stil stands. Rose Macaulay compare its ruined Corinthian columns t broken daffodils. There are few regular guides, so you can walk unheeded through the colonnade of the marketplace, sit on the steps of a small and exquisite theatre and climb the walls of the Temple to the Sun.

You can get a reasonable lunch in Palmyra at the Rest House (which also has dormitories for overnight guests), a very informal place where you are welcome to wander into the kitchen, as I did, and pick up the makings of a picnic lunch from whatever foods they have on hand. This is customary in Arab cafés in both Syria and Jordan: you are expected to go into the kitchen to select your meal, choosing whatever looks good to you. The food is simple but tasty, usually a kebab of some sort preceded by hommos, a paste of chick-peas and sesame.

Sight-seeing in Jordan

If you are driving back to Lebanon from Palmyra, you can break your homeward journey by staying overnight in Homs (the best hotel is the Beyrouth) and take an alternative route, crossing the border between Kousseiro and El Kaa, which will get you onto the Baalbeck Road (the drive from Homs to Baalbeck takes about two hours). From Beirut it is only a short flight to Jordan, the third in this natural triumvirate of Near East countries, by Middle East Airlines or Royal Jordanian Airlines. Or, if you prefer, you can drive or take the train from Damascus to Amman, the capital of Jordan, or fly via Syrian Airlines with a stopover in Jerusalem.

From the sight-seeing point of view, Amman (in ancient times, Philadelphia) is not important, but it is the logical center for side trips, and the new Intercontinental Hotel, almost a self-contained re-

Niches in a cave in Petra, believed to have been tombs, are carved from the soft, striped, rose-colored rock that gave the ancient city both its name and its fame.

ort with its outdoor barbecue, vimming pool, sun terraces, drug- ore, gift shop, and nightclub, akes a dandy headquarters. rom the city, a network of good ew highways runs north through ie Hills of Gilead to the ancient ty of Jerash; west through the loab mountains to Jericho, the ead Sea, and Jerusalem; and outh through the desert to Petra id the Red Sea coast at Aqaba.

Only a couple of years ago, etting to Petra was quite a pil- rimage. Travelers had to pick up ieir mules from the police station Wadi Musa before sundown and de down the track through the ik to the ancient city, spending ie night in dormitories in the est House. The new approach ains in expediency what it lacks i romance. The drive out of Am- ian on the Desert Highway takes nly three hours, and the side road hrough the mountains is paved ie whole way, almost to the edge f the site. A new and comfortable otel has been set up on the pe- iphery, with a restaurant con- ructed in a cool, natural cave. Many of the coach tours reach 'etra at ten in the morning and eave by three, but in my view this s a thousand pities. The romance f the "rose-red city, half as old as ime" evaporates in a gaggle of ssorted, footsore groups and ex- sperated guides, just as the ex- raordinary colors dissolve in the ight of high noon. So spend the ight in the new hotel, and get own to the city at dawn to see, in hat early light, the spectacle of ose-colored rocks striped with in- digo and yellow, curry brown, and pink.

This legendary city of the Na- bateans, which flourished from about 200 B.C. to 300 A.D., lay above one of the most important caravan routes between Baghdad and the Phoenician ports. Its orig- nal inhabitants were little more han bandits who plundered the caravans. Later they exchanged his method for the more lucrative and peaceable policy of escorting the caravans, at a heavy toll fee, through their territory. Contact with the outside world showed them some of the glories of Greek civilization, and they built for themselves an elaborate kingdom, mostly carved from the rock face, hence the name Petra. The stone is so soft that only the grandest of the monuments remain—the Pal- ace Tomb, the Treasury, and the Pharaoh's Tomb, all on the track which leads into the city center.

The western route out of Amman takes you to Jerusalem, once the province of pilgrims and historians, and now sufficiently equipped with luxury hotels (Mount Scopus, Saint George, and the Jerusalem Intercontinental, wonderfully sited on the Mount of Olives) to accommodate its visi- tors in comfort, the equal of any in the Middle East.

Jerusalem is a beautiful city, built on a series of cypress-clad hills and olive terraces, blossom- ing in spring with almonds and later with white lilies and scarlet poppies, with buildings, both old and new, built of the same pale golden stone.

The majority of the historic sights are on the Jordanian side of the Israeli frontier: Bethlehem, the Mount of Olives, Gethsemane, and Via Doloroso, which leads up to the church of the Holy Sepul- chre. The sights that stay in the mind are those two loveliest of mosques, the Dome of the Rock and El Asqua. In the latter, espe- cially, the spaciousness of marble and rose-colored limestone pillars gives the impression of a floating canopy. There are mosaics made from mother-of-pearl and ivory, inlaid with Lebanese cedar wood; others of Byzantine blue and gold; a rose window that remains from the Crusader occupation; and a pulpit brought by Saladin from Aleppo in the twelfth century.

But the real life of Jerusalem goes on, as it always has, in the souks. Compared with the much larger souks of Damascus, those of Jerusalem have an innocent air, and are a great deal cleaner. Little boys and youths stand about to protect their women, all too pic- turesque in their veils, from the infidel eye of the camera. There are smells of coffee and herbs, and the occasional blast of hot, fra- grant air from a bakery.

Before you embark on shop- ping in the souks, it is advisable to visit the Jordanian Products Exhi- bition in the Ritz Hotel building, which has fixed prices and a repre- sentative collection of all the Jor- danian handcrafts. These include mother-of-pearl work, either in- laid in wood or made into jewelry; silver Crusader crosses; and arti- cles of olivewood. There are charming, hand-carved olivewood caravans and Christmas cribs which can cost anything from $10 to $60 depending on the workman- ship, and olivewood salad sets, spoons, and plates (buy them un- veneered and keep them oiled to prevent the wood cracking). Heb- ron glass, the traditional clear, dark turquoise, is attractive and reasonable, and you can find ash- trays and candleholders made from Dead Sea stone (around $5) and Palestine pottery. At the pot- tery itself, near the American Con- sulate, you can buy on the spot. And look for candles in the many old craftsmen's shops on Christian Street near the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

Some of the better places to shop are: Jashan Bros., New Gate, for olivewood; the Arab Refugee Handworks Center near the Arche- ological Museum for cross-stitch embroidery in traditional designs —napkins, aprons, dolls; and, for antiques and gold, Ohan near the Lutheran Gate; Farid Salman's Queen of Sheba in Salah ed-Din Street; and Hagop Semerjan in the gold souk. A certain amount of bargaining is expected, especially if you buy in any quantity, but all gold is weighed and charged at world market rates. Apart from the more obvious clip joints, deal- ing is very fair, and mailing to the States can, in most instances, be relied upon.

Not that Jerusalem is all shopping and sight-seeing. There are some delightful enclaves dat- ing back to the end of the last cen- tury. The Anglican Cathedral of St. George is one. Its cloisters, in summer, are an enchanting mass of snapdragons, roses, lupines, and begonias. Visiting scholars, writers, and students live in its hotel, and there is an excellent li- brary, open to all visitors. Close by is the American Colony, now a ho- tel but so named simply because Americans once lived there, and the appellation stuck. The man- sion was built by a rich Arab land- owner in southern Turkish style for his four wives. They lived in considerable style in cool, stony rooms with huge arched windows spanning walls 4 feet thick. The courtyard is the centerpiece, with a mass of flowers and a little foun- tain. The peace and leisure of this sun-filled garden are something I remember with the greatest pleas- ure. The hotel has an attractive restaurant, and to stay there in the ambiance of a private house costs less than $5 a day for room and breakfast. It is an integral part of a Jerusalem you might otherwise never see.

Columnea newest big winner in basket plants

GR.GSBY

Columneas, in a score of species and varieties, are among the notable features of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Webster's oval conservatory at Islip, N. Y. Included are wide spreading airy types and luxuriant trailing forms.

A generation ago, even the botanists ignored it, and now look at it

Columneas are still not everybody's dish (or ba ket), even though their cousins, the African-vi lets and gloxinias, crowd the windowsills of t world. Virtually unknown thirty years ago exce to scientists and collectors, columneas sneaked i to the company of house plants by way of th fancier's greenhouse (see the one in H&G's pla window, page 174). Central and South America in origin (from Costa Rica, Panama, Colombi Venezuela), they share the family's common nee for a moist atmosphere and, especially, near-trop cal daytime warmth without direct sun. Unlik African-violets, columneas are for the most pa climbing or trailing species and mostly epiphyt ("tree perching"). Their growing habits, requir ments, and flower characteristics most closely r semble those of the aeschynanthus (formerly an now incorrectly known as trichosporum). Th leaves are generally under 2 inches in length borne in pairs on slender stems that, given fallin room, sometimes trail as much as 6 or 8 feet.

The species and varieties with the smalle leaves, some less than half-an-inch long, seem t accompany the most prodigiously trailing stem Most of the flowers, which are produced in wi ter and spring as a very variable rule, tend t reds and oranges, sometimes with white throat or corollas (tubelike form is characteristic of a the columneas). There are, less commonly, name forms with clear yellow flowers. The 'Yello Dragon' in our plant window is one of the hand somest of the breed, producing upward curvin flower tubes almost the whole year. Its leave bigger than those of some varieties, are shape like small spear points and are paired on stem shorter than others', that flare outward befor triations in leaf form as well as flowering characteristics are notable in the Websters' columnea collec-n—from long slender lance shapes down to velvety buttons no bigger than your little fingernail. In general, flowers run the yellow-orange-red gamut. The foliage—some furry, some smooth—is green to ruddy bronze. ne plants tend to assume open, horizontal, and airy forms. Others, especially those with the smallest leaves, oduce myriad trailing, beadlike chains. A Sedum morganianum at upper right provides a grace note.

y begin to cascade down. This variety is less sute than most—which means that the plants, s moisture-sensitive, are likely to be better ted to bay-window conditions.

None of the columneas, however—nor the schynanthuses, for that matter—will acquire really long-tressed look in the living room ndow that they will achieve in a warm green-use (one in which the night temperature re-ains at 60 degrees or higher and the relative midity at better than 60 per cent). In the ebsters' greenhouse, above and opposite page, mitropical conditions prevail, and the prodigal sult is spectacular to behold.

Of the now numerous species and varieties ailable from greenhouse specialists, one of the sh trailers is C. hirta, which has orange-red owers from late winter until May, then in late mmer and autumn. Its dark bronzy leaves have satiny sheen, and its stems are slightly fuzzy. Another epiphytic species from Costa Rica, C. gloriosa, has small, almost rectangular leaves, firecracker flowers, and also trails lavishly. C. affinis has the biggest leaves (sometimes 9 inches long) and heaviest stems; C. microphylla is the daintiest. Of the scores of species known, less than a dozen are readily available. So start with whatever ones you can obtain.

If you can grow good African-violets or gloxinias, you can grow good columneas. A loose, peat or leafmold soil and an unfailing moisture supply are equally desirable. (Most columneas, being epiphytic, would actually grow on a chunk of fern fiber, on corky bark, or a wad of sphagnum.) In any case, columneas need biweekly applications of liquid fertilizer. Few insects will ever trouble them. And their propagation is easy—either by rooting 3-inch tip cuttings in vermiculite or by holding a growing stem joint to the pot soil with a hairpin, then cutting it loose after rooting.

out of sight out of danger

A dead tree removed from your sight also removes its danger. Brittle, decayed wood is not only unsightly, but can split apart and crash without warning.

Don't take this chance. Davey experts can remove dangerous trees even while the ground is frozen, causing little or no lawn damage. Our stump grinder removes ugly stumps below ground level.

AND NOW IS THE TIME TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF DAVEY'S OFF-SEASON—FOR SPECIAL ECONOMY.

Enjoy unusual off-season economies in Davey's pruning, too. Trim off damaged or low-hanging limbs. A properly trimmed tree, even when dormant, can be beautiful against a winter sky.

Brace and cable heavy branches economically now, too. Sudden ice storms can split off branches and ruin a shapely, treasured, old tree forever.

Trim all your tree-care costs now—Davey's off-season is on!

Notes for December gardeners

It is the time for those simple chores that are seasonal pleasures rather than real work

First weekend

Beginner's mulch. The beginner here referred to is not the gardener, but the plant. First year transplants (and everything you put into the ground this autumn except seeds is a transplant of sorts) will perform better next season for a little timely protection now against either cold or frost action—heaving and thawing—or both. This is especially true, of course, of such late-planted perennials as iris and peonies, each of which are tougher than boiled owls once they get established, but which are vulnerable before that time. One of the shredded bark products now available almost anywhere, or such regionally obtainable mulches as pine needles or salt-marsh hay, are light, pervious, and stable. The same mulch materials are well suited also to the needs of new bulb beds. They will not keep chipmunks from digging up your crocus plantings (what will?), but they will answer all the usual thermal and physical needs.

Most biennial plants even including pansies will benefit as well from mulching now. The job may be fussier with pansies than with husky foxgloves, say, but the results will pay off next March when gardeners in frost country contemplate the damage unmulched plants can suffer.

Newly set evergreen shrubs, especially small conifers, will lose less essential winter moisture to evaporative winds if they, too, are mulched the first year. Here oak or beech leaves will serve nicely, may be left in place later. All other winter mulches should, as a general rule, be removed after what you conclude is the last frost, when warmth is needed to induce spring growth.

Reading notice. Two not very bracketable books deserve bracketing among notable new publications. One is Gertrude B. Foster's Herbs for Every Garden (Dutton, $4.95), one of the simplest and yet most informed additions to an enormous literature. The other, totally unlike the first, is William M. Harlow's Patterns of Life, The Unseen World of Plants (Harper & Row, $6.95). This is a photographic book (mostly macrophotographs, and some of great beauty and distinction) of the miraculous designs and forms assumed by the plant world. The caption-text is interesting, unadorned. Dr. Harlow is not only a very proficient photographer, but a noted dendrologist and an aficionado of tuberous begonias. Both these volumes would make fine gifts provided the giver first expended due thought on the proclivities of the recipient.

Second weekend

Long on roses. Optimistic rose growers will have waited as long as possible before cutting back rose bushes for the winter. A good criterion for judgment is to observe the plants in a stiff, gusty wind: if the cane tops wave about noticeably, they are probably too long and should be shortened until they stop waving; they will die back anyway. But solid, healthy stems may well be left until spring comes to demonstrate their viability—which in a rose stem is the ability to produce vigorous new foliage in support of awakening roots. Of course, if you keep your bushes low anyway, or if your winters are so severe that covering with earth or other enclosing shields is required for survival—then prune them down so as to leave 8- or 10-inch stems. But where only esthetic preference is involved, you can cut the canes down in spring after you have been offered a choice of new growth to retain or remove.

It is axiomatic that disease-ridden stems, especially those on plants that have been defoliated by black spot following late season neglect, should be pruned back to healthy tissue—always allowing room for new buds to start next year. To paraphrase the old saw: Don't bury your chickens before they have died. Maybe they will pull through after all.

Book note. A new rose book, and a charming one, comes from Eigil Kaier by way of Denmark, England (where Fred Fairbrother added supplementary material to the English translation), and New York. Labeled The Concise Handbook of Roses (Dutton, $5.95), it includes much pertinent text and many delightful color drawings by Verner Hancke. These alone are worth the price of admission.

Third weekend

Kindest cut of all. The renewal and replacement of fine plants—reincarnation, really—is one of the most rewarding of garden pursuits. It is practically a year-round process, but for indoor plants that have been luxuriating through the summer in the open garden, the making of cuttings is timely as well as rewarding. Every autumn the opportunity arises and every year we mention it about this time. You can cut back your plants when you bring them in (September or early October as a rule), and get huskier new plants before spring. Or you can enjoy the continuing blossoming of your plants inside for several weeks and then take your cuttings with virtually the same success.

The plants that every gardener always wants to duplicate or multiply for himself include most notably the pelargoniums and the fibrous rooted begonias. These do so well when unpotted and set in the open ground for the summer that it is a shame not to give them their heads. But they make such lusty growth as a rule that the only way to perpetuate them is to start new plants for smaller pots. So let us say you have stuffed your big geranium and begonia clumps into big pots and had your blossom bonus on the windowsill. Now make tip cuttings, 3 or 4 inches long at most, and root them in shallow containers of vermiculite or vermiculite-perlite mix. Prune back the old plants even farther, so that only a healthy substructure for future growth is left.

These are not only your insurance plants, but will make a stupendous show when put outside next spring. Meanwhile, let them rest, keeping them all but dry, until they show signs of starting up again. Busywork? Probably, but if you don't really need a lot of new plants next year, maybe less foresighted friends will.

The last leaf. Almost everybody can enjoy leaf raking on a bland sunny autumn afternoon. But when winter sets in, such a pas time loses a good deal of its allure Yet the last leaves—the oaks and beeches and the stubbornest of the maples—are those that cause the most trouble if left on the lawn They come down late, blow around in the rising winds, and pile up in the very places where it usually is hardest to maintain good turf anyway. So the cry goes out: Into the fence corners, men. (Although it is woman's work, too.)

In any yard, the physical characteristics that cause the winds to eddy and leaves to pile up remain the same year after year, as do the winds themselves. So after a season or two, you could walk blindfolded to the places where the blanketing drifts occur. The raking may take on some of the qualities of shoveling or forking, but the residual crop you harvest will be especially valuable as a winter mulch under your broadleaf evergreens. (See first weekend.) Since only the most durable leaves fall after the main season is over, they are likely to rot or pack but slowly. This resilient, stiff kind of leaf is the best for making an airy mulch. And when it does break down, over a period of several years, it seems to have a very valuable contribution to make in the form of soil nourishment and textural improvement. Furthermore, if you have enough wind eddies (and trees), your supply will be unfailing.

Reading notice. One of the handsomest and best printed books for gardeners is what Julia S. Birall, its author and compiler, has correctly but inadequately subtitled "an illustrated history": The Garden (Viking, $15). Its 9-by-11-inch pages (nearly 400 of them) are superbly laid out. The printing and the illustrative material are superb. No quickie text, what the author has to say is of the order of slow, rich, and toothsome background reading—starting in the Garden of Eden and coming down to contemporary California. A dandy gift.

TO MAKE THE COTTAGE you will need: 3-inch paint roller; two sheets of 25-by-40-inch .005 acetate for window panes, and extra tape to hold them in place; four string-pulls for ground-floor lace shades; 12 small wood knobs and short dowels; chalk; black crayon; red crayon. If you follow Binney & Smith's color scheme, you need: 2 tubes Liquitex acrylic titanium white; one tube each of light green, chrome green, crimson, bright blue; one empty pastry tube; jars. Mix white and red for hot pink and put in pastry tube. Mix white and blue for light blue, black and white for gray, and put in jars. Thin with polymer medium as needed. The trickiest part about the cottage is squeezing the white lace, pink curlicues, green foliage, and pink flowers directly from tubes fitted with a pastry tip. To get the hang of it, do the windows first. Cut clear acetate panes 8 by 25 inches and glue window pulls on outside. Pencil lace pattern on paper, lay pane over it, and trace as you squeeze. For roof and fence, chalk guideline and proceed like a master cake chef.

FRONT OF COTTAGE is 40 inches wide, 48 inches high to roof edge, 65 inches to tops of chimney and finial. COTTAGE SIDES are identical, 30 inches wide, 48 high. Cut all three parts and roll on white paint. Chalk chimney and roof lines, then paint upper corners gray. Use crayons for vertical-board lines and chimney bricks. Paint door frame, finial, balcony, and all knobs the same shade (ours are hot pink). Paper inside.

BALCONY is thin slice of Fome-Cor 14 inches wide, 11 high, with 2-inch sides. Score to bend. Add knobs; paint; push tabs through cuts and anchor with dowels.

TOPIARY TREE with foliage and flowers like cake frosting is 11 inches across. Push dowel trunk in fence 7 inches high, 12 and 30 long. Hinge with tape.

time that light would before long return to the world. In this I was not, although I was not then aware of it, alone. The early fathers of the Christian church in the West were not sure just when Christ was born. In the fourth century, they decided upon December 25th. When they picked this date, they were immediately accused of being sun worshipers by the Syrians and Armenians, who knew that the worshipers of Mithras reserved it for the celebration of the Dies Natalis Solis Invicti when they rejoiced in the victory of the powers of darkness—and that in Egypt it was the day when the sun god was reborn as a swaddled infant and laid in the arms of Isis. To this the Westerners could, and did, rejoin that the Syrians and the Easterners were themselves not above suspicion, since they filled their churches with the joyful cry, "the Virgin has brought forth; the light increases," on January the sixth, the day of the winter solstice upon which the Alexandrians were celebrating the birthday of Osiris. In their passion to prove each other wrong, both parties ignored the fact that they habitually called the Virgin the bearer of light, and that the whole of the forty days of special worship centered upon her. The Feast of Lights, which began with the Feast of the Nativity and ended with Candlemas, had been kept since the beginning of man's days as a maker of ceremonies and rituals, to celebrate the life-bringing sun's recovery of power and strength after its winter's weakening. It is that ancient, sacramental, festival of renewal—of the year, and of all one's hopes for the future—that is the real Christmas, or at least it is the one that I have understood and loved since 1917.

But when, as early as the week before Thanksgiving, the main street of the little town ne my house in the country is deck out, at the insistence of its Cha ber of Commerce, with plast Christmas bells, cute reinde plastic holly, and images of t obese, red-nosed, vulgarly mat old god of cadging, overeatin and overspending, I am n charmed. This festival of remors less public pressures, of displa and of competitive waste th would make even a Kwakiutl I dian blanch is not a thing I ca see any need for.

I am a hedonist. I believe i pleasure, and I think that all th I meant, as a child, to be include in the meanings of the word "nic ness" is good for people. But I d not think that a Christmas strain and anxiety that one mus borrow to pay for, a kind of publi feast of financial potency, is reall any fun at all.

What I like, and want to b free to enjoy, is the room full o loving friends and private happi ness; the room decorated an made pretty for love's sake; an above all the look on the faces o children surprised by the unex pected bounty and generosity o life—so unlike the greedy, petu lant expressions of what the Bibl calls "the daughters of the hors leech" who always want more, n matter what they have.

I suspect that we are all mak ing a great mistake in letting th festival of reborn light and joy become that of easy come, easy go, and in allowing fat old Mister Fun, with his empty booming laugh, to steal the crown of the year from the Mother and her Child. She, or so I believe, knows something about life and happiness that he has not even begun to learn. The candles on her tree throw real light into the real darkness which it is the human lot to live with and endure.
